WANTED, SMALL CHANGE.

From the time that inconversion commenced, one of the most pressing inconveniences of the crisis has peen the lack of small change. minor notes of the National Bank, which had previously circulated freely, were at a discount, and were soon rejected altogether. There was only le't the silver, of which there was not sufficient to go round for the ordinary purposes of minor commerce, especially as a quantity of it was jealously hoarded away by the working classes for some reason only intelligible to themselves. The for an ordinary gold piece; tradesmen had to lose their sales or else to give credit for small sums to entire strangers who as often as not conveniently forgot who as treatment of the state of their liabilities, for want of change; business houses had the greatest difficulty in collecting their small accounts, or else had to provide their collectors with silver change bought at a premium but paid away at par, for the same reason. In short, though a minor grievance in itself, this want of change has proved a real hindrance and loss to nearly all classes of peo-ple, the only ones profiting by it being the money changers. And all this arose solely from the determined attempt by the Government to force the National notes into circulation the National notes into circulation against the will of the people. Now, however, that reason may be looked upon as having disappeared with the return to conversion just decreed, and the acceptance of metal for customs dues and taxes. But the inconvenience will remains and in fact inience still remains and in fact in-

We think then that it should be one of the first duties of Govern-ment to remedy this. The mode is ment to remedy this sufficiently simple, and should indeed have been taken, if the Government had any true care for the interests of the people, the very first moment it was found that National notes were was found that National notes were no longer an accepted circulating medium. Since in the present state of the Exchequer and the present value of silver, any fresh issue of State coined silver is out of the question, let the Government extend authority to one or two of the present Banks of emission, whose notes are Banks of emission whose notes are on a gold basis to emit minor notes to extent of some two or three million dollars, on the same conditions and guarantee as they now emit their major notes. The relief to trade would be very great, and so for trop any one haing injured by the to extent of some two or three million dollars, on the same conditions and guarantee as they now emit their major nodes. The relief to trade would be very great, and so far from any one being injured by the arrangement, it might even be made a source of profit by charging a tax of say five per mil on the new emission. We do not know whether the charter of the National Bank conveys a monopoly of minor emission, but even if it does the mere fact that the Bank has suspended conversion causes it to lose such a suspended conversion causes it to lose such as suspended conversion causes it to l privilege. Trade should not be put to inconvenience and loss for want of small change because one particular bank cannot fulfil its obligations, at all events not so long as there exist other banks better qualified to carry out these obligations and in which public faith is as yet unshaken.

The River Plate Fresh Meat Trade, (Condensed from the S. A. Journal of Dec. 6.)

If there be any business which, on the face of it, appears more than another to possess the elements of success, it is certainly that of importing frozen mutton from the River Plate. It is well known that, during the last ten years, a large trade in frozen meat from our colonies of Australia and New Zealand has arisen, and judging from statistics, it would appear to have been sufficiently profitable to have led to a continuous and rapid development of the business. Now, as the River Plate is about ten thousand miles nearer Europe than our Australasian colonies, and as the Argentine Republic and Uruguay are also superior to them in climate and fertility of soil, capable of yielding an almost inaxhaustible supply of sheep at exceedingly low prices, it was only natural to have presumed that a similar trade would have been productive of even more beneficial

But this presumption does not, it must be admitted, find confirmation in the experience of the River Plate Fresh Meat Company, whose operations have thus far proved unremu-nerative Nor, in the case of this company, can this state of affairs be attributed to a high premium on gold, consequent on the existence of a de-preciated paper currency. In fact, the depreciation in the currency, which has been so disastrous to many branches of business in the Argentine Republic, should have been decidedly advantageous to this par-icular in-dustry, inasmuch as all purchases of stock and payment of wages will, doubtless, have been made in paper, whilst the sale of the produce on this side has, of course, been effected in sterling. In addition to these advanresult was great public inconvenience and in some cases positive loss. One had to pay a money changer 4 to 6 per cene premium for silver change ment bonus or guaranteee of five per cent, per annum upon the capital employed in that country. A casual observer would, therefore, be quite justified in concluding, as respects

usthed in concluding, as respects this industry, that the scope for its profitable prosecution in the Republic was especially favourable.

Such, no doubt, was the opinion of those who contributed to the share capital of the River Plate Fresh Meat Company when it was first languaged some eight years ago. first launched, some eight years ago, but how different have been the actual fortunes of this undertaking. Notwitstanding most able direction, however, the history of the company had been one of almost uninterrupted adversity, until last year, when, for the first time, a dividend was declared on the ordinary shares ed on the ordinary shares.

This distribution may have led the shareholders to anticipate that at last the enterprise had a turned the corner! and that a prosperous career was in view. We regret, however, to hear that this expectation is not likely to berealised. Dismal reports with regard to the state of the market for River Plate frozen meat have reached us and this information is confirmed by the following paragraph, which we extract from the Liverpool Journal of

The River Plate frozen meat trade is at present in very depressed condition. For some time past the prices at Beenos Aires have been advancing, whilst the selling price in England has been rapidly failing. The present price in England is Brd. per ib., compared to 5d, a short time ago, whilst the present cost at the River Plate, together with freigh and insurance, in less the outlock, so far as fresh trade is concerned, anything but encouraging.

The question which has now most interest for shareholders is that which so far as we can discover, the average price received by the company during their last financial year was afraction over 4d. per lb. But, as the paragraph we have quoted above shows, the price now tallen t. 3d. per lb, so that, if our calculations per 10., so that, it our calculations are correct, the company must be carrying on business with a loss of about 1/2d. per lb. This inference is confirmed by a remark made by Mr. Drabble, when presiding at the general meeting of the company on the 10th Sept. He the said:

- Un to April 1890 many results.

Up to April, 1890, we were able to sell at a fair profit, Since that time the market has been more awkward. Prices have declined here, whilst the cost price on the other side of the water has continued high. As regards the period from 1st May up to the present time, I am compelled to to 1 you that, if we wound up accounts to-day, we should do no more than clear expenses, overly little beyon.

At the date when the chairman uttered these ominous words, the uttered these ominous words, the price of River Plate frozen mutton was, as we find in the market circulars, 3 1/4 d. to 3 1/2 d. per lb., and had previously heen higher. The quotations, as shown by the London reports, have since been, on 4th October, 2 1/2d. to 3 1/4d.; on on 1st November, 2 3/4d. to 3d. and on 28th ult., 3d. per lb. If, therefore, the company was then only clearing its expenses, it would appear that its expenses, it would appear that the cost price of its mutton (including all charges) is about 3 1/2d, per 1b; and that every fall in the market price below that figure necessarily implies a corresponding loss.

But we hear that this company's misfortunes do not end there, as owing to the bad season for stock at Buenos Aires, much of the mutton arriving in Europe is of such inferior quality that it does not secure even the low prices ruling in the market.

It must not, however, be too rashly inferred, because this particular company has not been quite successful that there is nothing to be made out of the importation of Argentine frozen mutton. This business is, in fact, carried on by several private firms, and we have reason to think that they are able to realise a fair profit from their operations.

The Montevidean and Brazilian Telegraph Company, Limit d.

An extraordinary general meeting of this company was held at Lang-thorn House, on Tuesday, No-vember 25 to receive special resolutions as to the winding up of the companies, and to consider an agreement made with the Western and Brazilian Telegraph Company for taking over the whole undertaking. BUENDS AIRES.

On Monday about 400 holders of Cédulas held a meeting in Dr. Ezequiel A. Pereira's house and resolved to resist the imposition of the tax of 20 o/o on the interest payable on cedulas. Dr. Alagon denounced the law vigorously, upon various grounds.

A committee, consisting of Drs Pereira, Gerónimo Cortés, Alagon, Alcoria, Blossi, Basualdo and Cal-zada and Sres. Anderson, Hartens-reldt, Carabassa and Baya, was named to advise as to the best mode of proceeding in order to enforce payment of the interest in full or to procure the liquidation of the Provincial Hypothecary Bank, A subscription was opened to assist the poor people who have invested all their savings in Cédulas and who will suffer grie-vously from this infamous robbery. It is stated that some of the legisla tors who voted for the law will propose that it shall be repealed.

—Over 2000 persons attended another meeting held in the National Theatreon Wednesday, with the object of processing against the tax. reduced to 4 o/o, it having been 5 o/o -The statutes of the Anglo-Argentine Bank having been duly approved, registered and published, the Bank has now opened its doors to regular business, at the offices Za-bala 82, under the management of Mr. H. Lamond.

-The failure is announced of the house of Monte and Co₉ of Asuncion, who had large dealings with this market and B. Aires

-The term for inscription of shares for the meeting of shareholders of the National Bank expired yes-terday and as we learn, the number inscribed was not sufficient, so that a new date will have to be fixed.

-The tax of 9 o o on the capital of joint stock companies the head quarters of which are abroad, just passed by the Argentine Chambers, s driving out some of the leading insurance companies. We hear that the «New Yor,» Equitativa» and «Phoenic,» perhaps others as well, intend closing their agencies there. -The «Saturno» brought yester-

BAA BAA, BLACK SHEEP. BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

(To be continued.) In an undefined way Punch judged t advisable to keep both parents between himself and the woman in between himself and the woman in black and the boy in black hair. He did not approve of them. He liked the gray man, who had expressed a wish to be called «Uncleharri» They nodded at each other when they met, and the gray man showed him a little hip with rigging that took up and down.

«She is a model of the Brisk—the little Brisk that was sore exposed that day at Navarino.» The gray man hummed the last words and fell into a reverie. «I'll tell you about Navarino, Punch, when we go for walks together; and you mustn't touch the ship, because she's the Long before that walk, the first of many, was taken, they roused Punch and Judy in the chill dawn of a February morning to say Good-by; and of all people in the wide earth to Papa and Mamma—both crying this time. Punch was very sleepy and

«Don't forget us,» pleaded Mam-ma. «Oh, my little son, don't forget us, and see that Judy remembers

Tve told Judy to bemember, said Punch, wriggling, for his father's beard tickled his neck. I've told Judy—ten—forty—'leven thousand times. But Ju's so young—quite a baby—isn't she?

«Yes,» said Papa, «quite a baby, and you must be good to Judy, and make haste to learn to write and-

Punch was back in his bed again. Judy was fast asleep, and there was the rattle of a cab below. Papa and Mamma had gone away. Not to Nassick; that was across the sea. To some place much nearer, of course and equally of course they would return. They came back after din-ner-parties, and Papa had come back after he had been to a place called «The Snows,» and Mamma with him to Punch and Judy at Mrs. Inverari ty's house in Marine Lines. Assured-ly they would come back again. So Punch fell asleep till the true morn-ing, when the black-haired boy met ing, when the black-naired boy met him with the information that Papa and Mamma had gone to Bombay, and that he and Judy were to stay at Downe Lodge «forever.» Antirosa, tearfully appealed to for a contradiction, said that Harry had spoken the truth, andthat it behooved Punch to the property of the pr fold up his clothes nearly on going to bed. Punch went out and wept bit-terly with Judy, into whose fair head he had driven some ideas of the meaning of separation.
When a matured man discovers that he has been deserted by Providence, deprived of his God, and cast without help comfort, or sympathy upon a world which is new and strange to him, his despair, which may find expression in evil-living, the writing of his experiences, or the more satisfactory diversion of suicide, is generally supposed to be impressive. A child, under exactly similar circumstances as far as its knowledge goes, cannot very well curse God and die. It howls till its nose is red, its eyes are sore, and its head aches. Punch and Judy, through no fault of their own had nothing, though the gray man assured Punch that he might pull the rigging up and down as much as he pleased; and Judy was promised free entry into the kichen. They wanted Papa and Mamma gone to Bombay beyond the seas, and their grief while it lasted was without lasted was without remedy.

When the tears ceased the ho was very still. Antirosa hnd decided it was bester to let the children «have their cry out,» and the boy had gone to sch ol. Punch raised his head from the floor and sniffed mournfully. Judy was nearly asleep. Three short years had not her how to bear sorrow with full knowledge. There was a distant, dull boom in the air—a repeated heavy thud. Punch knew that sound in Bombay in the Monsoon. It was the sea—the—sea that must be traversed before any one could get to Bombay.

«Quick, Jul» he cried, «we're close to the sea. I can hear it! Listen! That's where they've went. P'raps we can catch them if we was in time. They didn't mean to go without us,

They've only forgot.»

«Iss,» said Judy. «They've only forgotted. Less go to the sea.»

The hall-door was open and so was the garden-gate.

"It's very, very big, this place," he said, looking cautiously down the road, and we will get lost; but I will find a man and order him to take me back to my house—like I did in

He took Judy by the hand, the two fled hatless in the direction of the sound of the sea. Downe Villa was almost the last of a range of newly built houses running out through a chaos of brick-mounds, to a heath where gypsies oc-casionally camped and where the Garrison Artillery of Rocklington practised. There were iew people to be seen, and the children might have been taken for those of the soldiery who ranged far. Half an hour the wearied little legs tramped across heath, potato-field, and sand-

"I'se so tired," said Judy, and Mamma will be angry.» «Mamma's never angry. I suppose she is waiting at the sea now while Papa gets tickets. We'll find them and go along with them Ju, you mustn't sit down. Only a little more and we'll come to the sea. Ju, if you sit down I'll thmack you!» said Punch. They climbed another dune, and came upon the great gray sea at low tide. Hundreds of crabs were scut-tling about the beach, but there was no trace of Papa and Mamma not even of a ship upon the waters— nothing but sand and mud for miles

And «Uncleharri» found them by chance—very muddy and very forlorn—Punch dissolved in tears, but trying to divert Judy with an cickle trab, and Judy wailing to the pitiless, horizon for Mamma, Mamma! — and again «Mamma!» (To be continued.)
