POLITICAL NOTES.

The Council of State sat on Friday. A Message was received from the Executive forwarding the law of wheel taxes for the year 1898-99 Reterred to Commit-tee, A short Bill was passed determining the process to be ob-served by the Committee of Acrest of the sitting was devoted to the Law of Electoral Reform, with which some further progress was

An interesting and perhaps unique ceremony will take place o-day namely the destruction by ire of the fraudulent civic registers f the Herrera and Borda periods, which served as the instruments of those had presidents in falsifying the sulf age, suffocating the will of the people and evading the Constitution. A whole epic might e written around these registers. In fact, we think it is almost a piny that, instead of being destroyed, there are not sent to the National Museum to be kept there as an example and warning to future generations of how low the Republic had fallen politically in the period 1800-97. Yesterday's Siglo has a very a nusing and eloquent paragre in on the subject, which unfortunately does not lend itself to treaslation. Thecremation will take place in the furnaces of the Electric Light Company.

We learn that the united Finance and Foment Committees of the Council of State will commence study of the Port question during the present week.

A peculiar circumstance seems to have escaped the notice of our contemporaries, namely that since the 1st instant the country is with-out a Budget even in form. The Budget for the new financial year has not been passed - there is as yet no hint of when discussion will commence-nor has the Council of State passed the usual formal Bill prolonging the previous Budget ratil the sarction of a new one. We are therefore without a Budget, even in theory. Practically the situation is no novelty, the situation is no novelty, for there never was really any proper Budget passed during the Borda period and only one during the Herrera period, and such Budget as there was, might have been waste paper for all the attention the Executive paid to it, Fortunately, the Government of Sr. Cuestas is far more to be trusted without a Budget than were the Governments of his prewere the Governments of his predecessors with one, so there is no cause for alarm. Still, the council of State should lose no time in

An absurd rumor has been start ed an i has been echoed by one or two of our contemporaries, to the effect that Sr. Cuestas, dissatisfied with the results of the civic registration, is desirous to prolong the provisional situation, avoiding a presidential election next March ! It is difficult to imagine toe least reason for such a step, nor would the consistent with Sr. Cuestas' hospitality and goodwill of the Argattitude since he has occupied the entine Government and people. Executive Power. We expect it We have no hesitation whatwould not be difficult to trace the vorted to sound the spanish coasts. The new municipal Budget, prepared by the competent hands of Dr. Carlos Maria Pena, is about to be presented. We understand that the presented the presented of the it embraces very substantial cono-mies, especially in the suppression or rather the coalition of a number of the suburban auxiliary Boards, thus greatly reducing the machin-

IS ARGENTINA NEUTRAL?

(We quote the following para-graphs from an article in the Re-vieto of the River Plate, as they are in great measure applicable here. The Review, bowever, over looks the strongest proof of all of the violation of neutrality, namely that the Spanish and their friends are allowed and exercise a public propaganda impossible to the other side. It is only ne-cessary to imagine the conse-quences that would ensue if the N. Americans and their friends employed a similar propaganda, if they raised public subscriptions for the war and exposed disgusting caricatures insulting the Queen Regent and the French President, to see how very little neutrality there is in the matter. In fact there is no neutrality at all where a license and advantage are accorded to one side which are impossible to the other.)—

If the above question were fired pointblank at any member of the Argentine Government at the present time, there is little doubt that he would answer it, perhaps somewhat indignantly, in the affirmat-ive, but the average observer of Argentine affairs might well be excused it, when contemplating in this republic, the attitude of the press which represents their particular interests, and of its Argentine contemporaries, he permitted himself to think it is extraorally difficult to disthat it is extremely difficult to distinguish Argentine neutrality from furious partisanship. We had pre-sumed, in the first place, that if Argentina were neutral, then every resident in the country would be bound to participate in that neutral ity, and that, however much we might sympathise with either bel-ligerent, we must refrain from any public demonstration of such sympathy; but it would appear, from what has taken place in this country since the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Spain, that this pre-sumption is unfounded, and that, although the Argentine Govern ment has declared itself neutral, and although all foreigners, be they Spaniards or Americans, or of any other nationality, have precisely equal rights under the Constitution to the Spanish residents is accorded a liberty of speech and action, which has already degenerated in license, and may easily cul-minate in overt acts of violence against English or Americans here, which would bring very serious responsibility upon Argentina. . . . Furthermore, we should like to know whether the attitude of the Argentine Gov-ernment would have been precisely the same if the number of Americans resident in Argentina had been equal or nearly so to that of the Spaniards, and if the Americans had held public meetings for the purpose of augmentation of military supplies or arms for their side, or had allowed them-selves to reply to the hor ribly bestial insults to which they and the English have been equally subjected by the papers which profess to represent Spanish interests in Buenos Aires, Would given the same license to the Anunderstand the attitude of the Arof State should lose no time in sanctioning one, if only to put an end to one of the irregularities of the situation.

I rumor has been start by considerations of self-interest to be considered in the self-interest to be c gentine press in the question, and we appreciate the fact that, cultivate Spanish sympathies but, we frankly do not understand why the Government continues to allow the Spanish press to violate every precept of decency and culture by gross and bestial insults, pictorial and otherwise, directed against the citizens of the United States, who production as Don Quijote be allow ed to exist for an instant, and public decency, if it were anything more than an expression in Argentina, would long ere this have caused its suppression...The attitude of the Spaniards in Buenos Aires in relation to the sympathy shown some little time ago by Argentines and others towards Cuba, and now as-sumed towards Americans and English with reference to the Spanish American War, clearly demonstrates their belief that they have rights and privileges here which other foreigners have not, and it behoves the Argentine Government to correct this view with as little delay as possible, or the time may come when they may have cause to regret the pusilianimity, to call it by a no stronger term, which has been manifested by them since the war broke out.

THE WAR.

There was important news yesterday, though the telegrams are confusing and contradictory, as usual, in the details. The U. usual, in the details. The U. S. forces commenced the attack on Santiago early on Friday morning. The principal struggle was at the village of Caney, some 5 or 6 miles to the north of Santiago, while at the same time General Lawton's column advanced on the north west of the city. There seems to be have been some hard fighting, but, if the telegrams are to be trust-ed, the Spanish forces were eventually driven back, the U.S. forces occupied the outer retrenchments or fortifications of the city, and are holding their po-sition. Accounts as to the losses differ, but they have evident-ly been the heaviest of any en-gagement since the war began. A N. York Herald telegram says 400 killed and wounded on the American side, and a later Washington telegram cofficially raises the number to 500. reinforcements to the U.S. troope had come up and they were preparing for another attack yes-terday. One U. S. company was completely cut to pieces. There is

The squadron also took part in the combat, bombarding the forts. It is said the dynamite gun was also employed According to one telegram the entire combat was merely a feint, the object being to complete the destruction of the Morro fort (once more?) so as to leave the entrance to the bay free. Admiral Cervera's squadron seems to have remained inactive; according to one account his vessels have been partially dismantled. A spy apparently confirms the sink-ing of the «Reina Mercedes» but it is now pretended that it was sunk purposely by the Spanish themselves in order to block the channel (and help to bottle themselves in ?) in addition to S. cruisers have bombarded Manzanillo They did great dam age to the forts, but also sulfered inturn, one of the cruisers (name not transpired) being disabled and towed away by her consorts when they retired. According to a Herald message, 70 dead were taken into Santiago after the combat of Juragua on General Blanco and Admiral Cerve ra owing to the complete inaction of the latter, 100 deserters from the Spanish forces at Santiago surrendered to the Americans Contradictions accumulate about Admiral Camara's squadron After having been told that it had passed the Suez Canal, we are now told that it is still hanging around Port Said. The difficulty seems to be with the coal, the U.S. Consul at Port Said is said to have bought up interests in Buenos Aires. Would all the coal there (the Spanish the Argentine Government have could not have taken it anyway without a breach of neutrality) and glo-Saxon as they have given to the Latin foreigner *and whom would they have held responsible for the consequences of that license ? We have said in former articles that we have said in former articles that we some Americans have paid a lancy carrying a sufficient supplying its own transports are probably mere ment of the Celestial Empire.

The sympathy between the British and American' nations, sympathy of blood, race, language and kindred idea was rarely, if ever, stronger than at the present moment, and it is to be hoped that when the war is over, if not before it will find expression in a treaty which will prove an indissoluble tie between the two nations, and enable them to face the rest of the world as a united and compact whole in all questions of mutual interest. -Though the weather yesterday

- We hasten to explain. The Cinderella Dance mentioned in our last as likely to be held on the 18th or 20th instant, is not being organsed by the Ladies' Committee, but by a Bachelors' Committee which thus intends to make some return for the hospitality of the Ladies. The next Dance of the latter will take place on August 17. There are thus two dances to look forward to instead of one, and the two Committees will enter into a friendly rivalry to see which can do the best. As to the thought that the rivalry should be anything but friendly, we shudder to contem-plate the results. If the ladies were to refuse to go to the gentlemen's dance, and the gentlemen to that of the ladies-where would be the dance? For our part, we say the more Committees and the more dances, the better, and we wish the fullest measure of success to each and all.

Dr. McLaughlin officiated in the marriage ceremony; the service was choral, Mr. Wellby presiding at the organ. The pulpit was prettily decorated with flowers, &c. The church was filled with the friends of the bride and bridegroom. The bride wore a satin dress with long veil decorated with the orthodox orange blossom. The bridesmaids, Misses Lola and Elvira Newbery, cousins of the bride, wore pretty dresses of surah silk with yellow waistbands. The bride was given away by her brother Mr. Lewis Newbery Thomas who, we believe, came specially from the United States for the occasion. The bridegroom's sest mans was Mr. Rodolfo Newbery Junior, assisted by his brother After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Huntington received the congratulations of their numerous friends in the vestry, and the iospiring lations of their numerous friends in the vestry, and the inspiring sounds of Mendelssohn's Wedding March accompanied the bridal par-

LONDON NOTES

SATURDAY, JUNE 4 Commodore Schley's official report of the reconnaisance at San tiago on Tuesday has been received in Washington. He adds that the object of the American fire was to develop the enemy's batteries, and that the result was entirely satis-factory. No American vessel was hit and no man was hurt.

"WHERE THERE'S A WILL."

(A SHORT STORY)

Lady Lumsdaine lightly pressed a bandkerchief to her eyes, and, for a moment, was unable to proceed. Her recollections of Sir Peter, coupled recollections of Sir Peter, coupled with the uncertainty about Mr. Poltimore, were too disturbing.

«Why dwell upon the past?» said Euphemia. «It is unwise when it fills the heart with sorrow.»

«I must,» replied Lady Lumsdaine. «I must when it bears upon the present. Euphemis, I look upon it as a sacred duty to fulfil the last wishes of Sir Peter. The dear man was so thoughtful that he actually was so thoughtful that he actually left me a wedding-gift.>

«Really!» exclaimed Miss Browns.
« What is it? Diamonds?»

«My dear girl, I have not the slightestides,» returned Lady Lums-daine. «It is in a sealed box at my banker's, and I am not to have possession of it until I am engaged. Sir Peter had his little eccentricities, and this fancy of his was one of

«I would be engaged to some one within a month, a said Miss Browne, with a laugh. «I would, if I had to «Euphemial» cried Lady Lumsdaine reprovingly.

«I would,» reiterated the audacious Miss Browne. «But let us talk about Mr. Poltimore. Don't you think that a little encouragement would be advisable? The man seems to have a timid nature.» «Encouragement!» exclaimed Lady Lumsdaine. «No. I have gone far enough in that direction. The instincts of a woman make me shrink from a further display of my feel-ings. There is something almost indelicate in your suggestion, my dear Euphemia—really almost inde-licate. Besides, I have tried encouragement, and it has been such a complete failure.>

«Then play Lady Disdain,» said Miss Browne.

Lady Lumsdaine looked somewhat doubtful. It might have been about the efficacy of the treatment, it might have been about her ability to satisfactorily perform the part.

«The experiment is worth trying,» Miss Browne continued. «Despair makes men bold. Drive Mr. Poltimore to despair >

Lady Lumsdaine appeared to con-template the prospect of his reduction to that deplorable condition with considerable complacency. The feminine tenderness which is pained by inflicting pain on others, may have been soothed by the reflection that it would be all for his own good.

«How do you propose to accomp-lish that design?» she enquired laugh-ingly. Yet there was some seriousness in the question, too.

«Let him be tormented by a fa-voured rival, my dear, replied Miss Browne. «A man values a woman more when he thinks he is in danger of losing ber. It is the nature of the

As the picture of Mr. Poltimore suffering mental tortures rose before her mind's eye, the complacency of Lady Lumsdaine visibly increased.

«It seems so heartless, > she said. There are difficulties in the way, too. In this quiet part of the country, Cuphemia, I don't see any I can elevate to that position.

«No?» said Miss Browne reflectively. Then she paused. Then she repeated, but decidedly this time,

«No.» softly echoed Lady Lums-daine. Then she asid triumphantly: «Major Callenden! We have forgotten our neighbour, Euphemia.»

There was a brief silence. Miss Browne straightened her back in a manner suggestive of disapprobation, indignation, defiance. She had not forgotten Major Callenden. Far from it. But the possibility of his being selected as an accessory to the plot of subjugating Mr. Poltimore had not presented itself for consideration. It came upon her with a shock, and the was momentarily inclined to she was momentarily inclined to resent it. However, the impulse was successfully resisted, and Euphemia nestled still closer to Lady Lums-daine's side. «My dearest Cornelia,» she said, «you will have your hands full. Major Callenden! He will be even more difficult to manage than Mr. Poltimore.»

«Ithink not, Euphemia,» replied Lady Lumsdaine, mechanically arranging her hair as though preparing for conquest. «I think not. That is, up to a certain point. Of course, the man will never marry. He has said so a thousand times.»

«So many protestations show that he feels his dauger, a said Miss Browne, with some shrewdness.

Her face brightened, as though her thoughts were pleasant.

«Ob, he will never marry,» Lady Lumedaine continued; «but that is of no consequence. Major Callenden will answer my purpose.>

Miss Browne made no reply beyond a gentle pressure of her friend's hand, which had this ad-vantage: it was capable of being construed in any way most pleasing to Lady Lumsdaine's feelings.

So interesting had been the con-versation, that Miss Browns had paid small heed to the flight of time. It was growing quite dark as she walked towards home, down the
