POLITICAL NOTES.

After a rest of a few days, an attempt is being made to revive revolutionary alarms. The alarms this time come from Salto, already sufficiently distinguished on account of its electoral turbulence. The tale is that the «collectivists» possibly in connivance with their friends concerned in the electoral intrigue, have undermined the fidelity of the Urban battalion and other local forces, and are thus prepared for a rising in connection with the forces the «collectivists» are supposed to have gathered in Entre Rios. We do not know what truth there may be in the matter but the alarm has reached the Government, which has ordered extra forces there from Paysandu, and has also ordered Col. Viera, ex-inspector of police, to take charge of the vacant Prefecture. The latter step was certainly not judicious, as it is precisely Col. Viera, who is signalled as one of the chief causes of the electoral troubles there. He is certainly not a persona grata in Salto, and Sr. Cussias would have shown more wisdom in naming someone who would have adopted a conciliatory policy, instead of an official whose conduct is already under suspicion and who will only increase the ill blood prevalent in the Department. The rumors which were current of a rising in Tacuarembó have been entirely contradicted.

Sr. F. Bauzá, as President of the Colorado Committee has initiated legal proceedings against the Electoral Board of Salto for violations of the electoral law. This will take the dispute raging there into the domain of the law courts. The case is the first under the new law, and probably the first of the kind in the Republic, where hitherto all sorts of electoral violations have been committed with legal impunity so its progress will be watched with no little interest.

A queer tale comes from Cerro Largo to the effect that the local caudillo General Justino Muniz has migrated to Brazil, writing to the President of the Republic that he no longer felt secure now that the 3rd Cavalry Regiment is dissolved. Except for the fact that he was allowed a small guard, the connection is not clear. General Muniz calls himself a «blanco» though he has generally opposed the party whose name he claims, and gave his services to President Borda to fight against it in the revolution of 1897. Anyhow, he is not of such importance that the Republic will not survive his absence, should he decide to go.

The rumor, which had caused a disagreeable impression, that Col. Z. Pereyra was to be appointed Prefect of the Capital, is effectually contradicted so far there is no official candidate for the post.

The Colorado Committee have very wisely resolved to let drop the incident provoked with the Nationalist Committee by the ill-tempered notes of Sr. Bauzá. We congratulate them on the decision.

The trial of Col. José Escobar for «want of respect to the President» took place before the Council of War, in public audience, on Thursday, not concluding until 3 a. m. on Friday morning. His defence consisted, it will be remembered, in having published an adhesion to a decidedly seditious letter published by Dr. A. F. Costa in the Siglo. He was defended by Dr. J. M. Castellanos, who was several times called to order by the Court for introducing irrelevant remarks on the political situation and for trying to make the question a party one. He was eventually found guilty of the offence charged against him, which, however, was considered purged with the imprisonment already suffered, some five months, so he was ordered to be set at liberty. The Prosecutor had asked for a year's imprisonment. There was a large and rather disorderly attendance in the Court, including many well-known «collectivists», who warmly congratulated the Colonel on the result, giving cheers for him and for the «colorado» party. Why the latter should be dragged in, only they can explain. The Colonel did wrong certainly, but we hardly think his offence was worthy the dignity of a prosecution.

We have left to the last the chief question of the day, namely the dissolution of the Council of State and immediate return to constitutional government. It was expected that this would be fully opened in the sitting of the Council to be held yesterday, but, owing to our early hour of going to press, we are unable yet to state the result. The Siglo is still trying to convince its readers that it would be unconstitutional to resume constitutional government, and that to do so would be to afford fresh excuse for revolution, but it is practically alone in its propaganda.

ANOTHER CASE.

Another case has just occurred which illustrates the extraordinary notions held by local juries as to what constitutes «legitimate self-defence.» In Colon railway station, on May 21st last, a murder was committed which attracted considerable public attention. The actors were Pastor Melendez, a member of a well known and respectable family, who had played a prominent part in the recent revolution and a police clerk named Tomás Berreta. Both were young men of 23 or 24. On the previous day they had had a quarrel, in which, we believe, blows were exchanged. On the day in question, Melendez was in the railway station and about to enter the train, when Berreta stopped him, asking for a few words. Not wishing to lose the train which was just on the point of starting, or perhaps not wishing to renew the quarrel, Melendez pushed Berreta aside, the latter dropping into one of the seats on the platform. Berreta then took out a revolver and fired twice at Melendez. Both shots took effect, and the unfortunate Melendez died in a few minutes. The case has just been tried in the Criminal Court and the jury has brought in a verdict to the effect that Berreta was provoked, threatened and attacked, and that he acted in «legitimate self-defence» in killing Melendez. In accordance with this verdict, Judge Montaña has pronounced a sentence of acquittal. The sentence will of course be appealed against, but meanwhile the monstrosity of the verdict should not escape notice.

We are glad to observe that one of our native contemporaries, the Nacional, has taken up the case, and has entered a vigorous protest against a verdict that is both illegal and unwarranted.

The Penal Code of the Republic (Art. 17) establishes clearly the conditions which constitute self-defence. These are: 1. Illegitimate aggression; 2. Reasonable necessity of the means employed to prevent or repel the damage; 3. Absence of sufficient provocation on part of the defender. These conditions were not fulfilled, the more especially as Melendez neither took out nor carried any weapon. The jury was not justified therefore, in asserting that self-defence was «proved.» Even, however, had the self-defence been clearly proved, the jury exceeded its powers in declaring that it was «legitimate.» The legitimacy or illegitimacy of self-defence is a question of law (derecho) and not of fact (hecho) and therefore the jury was not qualified to pronounce upon it. This, however, is what juries here are continually doing, and this is one of the reasons that impunity is allowed to acts which ought to be punished as serious crimes. The duty of the Judges in such cases, is to accept the part of the verdict dealing with the facts, and to set aside (desestimar) the part dealing with questions of right and therefore beyond the province of the jury. This is a duty, which, up to the present, we have never seen performed by any judge here, though the cases in which the juries have returned improper verdicts have been frequent and numerous.

We have dwelt on the above case at some length because it is exactly parallel to the Lewis Carvalho case. In both instances, as in many others to which we have called attention, the jury have returned an improper verdict of «legitimate self-defence» which was not only not supported by the evidence, but which it was beyond their province to give at all. In all these cases the judge ought to have set aside the verdict. We may also call attention to the fact that in protesting against an improper verdict of acquittal, the Nacional has done a precisely similar thing to that which provoked our black-mailing prosecution by Carvalho. As, however, the sentence of Dr. Bastos has defined the rights of the press in this matter, it need have no fear of the consequences.

MR. WORTHINGTON'S REPORT ON SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

As promised last week (says the South American Journal of November 19.) we begin to-day the publication of extracts from Mr. Worthington's report upon British trade in Chili. The third report, which deals with the Argentine Republic, is still more interesting, and both on account of the greater volume of trade with that country, and also because of the large amount of information given with regard to local industries. We regret that, owing to the voluminous nature of these reports, it will take us some time before we will be able to publish the valuable information it contains. Meantime, the following general remarks will be of service. Generally the demand for British goods has been falling off, apparently for the reason so often given by those who have inquired into the cause of their displacement by foreign goods in other countries. One cause is that in some cases freights are cheaper from the Continent. Mr. Worthington especially refers to the employment by a Hamburg shipowner of very large steel sailing-vessels with success. As usual, great difficulty is experienced in inducing English manufacturers (a) to take up a new pattern or design on a small order; (b) to make qualities very much lower than they have been accustomed to; (c) to make a low quality with a finish and get-up such as they might think only belonged to a higher class; (d) to send samples prepared in a sufficiently attractive form; (e) generally to take to minutize which might appear to them unimportant, but which may be very important as affecting the sale of goods here. As regards Argentina, Mr. Worthington remarks that freights do not, apparently, affect British imports as much as in Chili, except as regards Italian competition. Mr. Worthington says, with reference to the loss of trade by Great Britain:—«In not a few cases the article, identical in quality, is cheaper to manufacture on the Continent, but in many others I am constrained to conclude from what I have learned, that the British manufacturers have lost the trade in greater or less measure by failing promptly to comply with the information as to changes in quality, make, or get-up, etc., which may have been conveyed to them. It has been said to me ad nauseam, in one form or another, «We asked British manufacturers to do so and so, or to make this in such and such a way, but they said they could not, or it did not suit them and so we went elsewhere.» The impression seems frequently to be that the British manufacturer is doing too well and is too full of orders to care for making changes which, perhaps, involve expense and alteration of plant to a greater or less extent, whereas when anything is asked for in Germany or America it is promptly made, and if not quite what is wanted is altered as required. In one or two cases I have been glad to learn that British wares have come into the running again, but these are few and far between, and it will not enlarge upon those trades where we are holding our own, especially as, unfortunately, the general trend is in the direction of our losing more and more ground.»

Mansfield, 9 third class.—The «Nile» had an unusually quick passage out, reaching here in 20 days after calling at eight ports. The voyage was a lively one, being beuiled by athletic sports on board, various dances, concerts, etc. Left by P. S. N. Co's «Iberia» for Liverpool, etc., Dec. 16. Mr. and Mrs. J. Font and child, Mr. G. R. Hertz, Mr. J. Villamil, 4 third class.

SUNDRIES.

—It is telegraphed from Russia that the Government has resolved to banish the eminent author Leo Tolstoi, on the ground that his writings are «subversive.» The loss will be to Russia.

—Tolstoi banished from Russia. Max Nordau, almost the only eminent Austrian of the generation, banished from Austria Zola a fugitive from France for daring to speak the truth. Germany overrun with contemptible prosecutions for lese majeste. Italy blighted with political persecutions. Such is the tale of liberty in Europe at the close of the nineteenth century. The noble ideas and high purposes of 1840-1860 are all forgotten, and Europe has become again one vast field of despotism, the people of which are trampled down by the mailed heels of Czar, Kaiser and Emperor, or of their military agents. A more pitiful example of retrogression is hardly to be found in history. There will have to be another and a greater revolution yet, before liberty becomes a reality.

—A Spanish Zarzuela Company will make its debut at the San Felipe Theatre this evening. The chief attraction will be a biograph or cinematograph giving representations of a bull-fight in Madrid. No doubt this will draw, but it has come very inopportunely in view of the present agitation for restoration of the admirable sport.

—We have received another communication from the bicyclists on tour, but unfortunately it reached us too late for publication to-day, so we defer it until our next.

—Mr. A. Tring manager of the Eastern Uruguay Railway, was warmly welcomed by his many friends in town on his return yesterday in the «Nile» looking very much the better for his trip.

—A post mortem examination has fully proved that the man Angelotti died from a dose of salts of lemon, given instead of Epsom salts. The druggist who sold the fatal dose will now have to face the responsibility. (Epsom salts [sulphate of magnesium] and salts of lemon [oxalic acid] are so like each other in general appearance and characteristics, that it requires an expert to distinguish between them. Both are articles of common use, but one is highly poisonous and the other a harmless purgative and frequent household remedy. One of the first things taught to druggists' assistants on entering the business is to distinguish between these two salts, and such a mistake as has occurred above—though it has many precedents—could only arise from criminal carelessness or from the employment of an ignorant shopman in contravention of the regulations.)

—Two suicides occurred yesterday morning between 7 and 8 a. m. The first was that of a young man named Juan Arispe, employed in a restaurant in Calle Ciudadela, who blew out his brains whilst riding in a hackney coach which he had just hired. No reasons are known for the act. The other was that of a woman named Paula Ramos living in one of the houses of ill-fame in Calle Santa Teresa, who poisoned herself with a solution of corrosive sublimate. It would seem that corrosive sublimate (bi-chloride of mercury) is taking the place of the once popular solution of match heads in kerosene, for this is the third suicide of a woman by this means in a few days, and is evidently the result of imitation. The question which the authorities ought to investigate, is how they obtain the poison in doses strong enough to be fatal, for its sale is illegal.

—Agitation is on the increase in Paris among the ex-members of the Patriotic League, as they believe that Dreyfus is already on his way to France. Meanwhile they have amused themselves by getting up a subscription to enable the widow of Col. Henry to prosecute the papers that have accused her late husband of being the real culprit in the affair. This will involve the washing of more dirty linen.

—Mr. Bryan, the ex-silverite democratic candidate to the presidency of the United States, has now adopted as his platform energetic opposition to the imperialist or colonial expansion policy of Mr. McKinley.

—Intense cold, such as has not been known for 27 years, is being experienced on the Atlantic seaboard of the United States.

—The U. S. Government has sent orders to General Brooks and Admiral Sampson to intervene in Havana to put a stop to the prolonged disorders there provoked by the Spanish military.

—The telegrams keep telling us that Lord Rosebery will succeed Sir W. V. Harcourt as «leader» of the Liberal party in the Commons. This is impossible, as Lord Rosebery has the misfortune (his own expression) to sit in the House of Lords. He may become leader of the party in general, but someone else must be found to lead it in the House of Commons, the choice probably lying between Mr. Asquith and Mr. Morley.

—Countryman (to dentist)—«I wouldn't pay nothing extra for gas. Just jerk it out, if it does hurt.»
Dentist—«You are plucky, sir. Let me see the tooth.» Countryman—«Oh, tain't me that's got the tooth-ache; it's my wife. She'll be here in a minute.»

—When Sir J. Wolfe Barry's paper on London streets and traffic appears in the Journal of the Society of Arts it will be found to contain glad tidings for cyclists. This is the passage: «The present price of bicycles will not, I suppose, rule very long, and we shall see these admirable machines made at prices which now seem unattainably cheap. The weight of a bicycle is so small that the value of the material, except the india-rubber tyres, cannot be serious. And if all the parts of a good machine-made watch can be manufactured and put together and sold for less than £1, the manufacture and putting together of a bicycle ought not to cost more. It would add the cost of the steel and the india rubber, it surely seems not too sanguine to suppose that a few years hence bicycles will be sold at about a fourth of their present price.»

—Soldiers have sometimes curious fancies. Their fondness for preserving bullets by which they have been wounded is well known. A patient at Netley Hospital improves upon this. His great desire, a correspondent tells us, is to get not only the bullet when it shall have been extracted, but Röntgen photographs showing the shot as it lies at present close to a fractured bone. On the promise that his wish shall be gratified, he cheerfully submits himself as a subject for various experiments with the X rays.

—We quote from the B. A. Herald:—«Dr. Herrera y Obes should recall the fact that for men like him there is no resurrection in public life. He had his chance, and he is a man of such ability that he might easily have been the first and best President of the Uruguayan Republic, with the best elements about him; but he was so thoroughly bad that he became the worst, for he had the ability to be worse than most of his predecessors. Now he is a back number, do what he may.»

LONDON NOTES

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17.

King Humbert, in his speech from the Throne yesterday, in opening the Italian Parliament, did not announce any amnesty for the May prisoners. He only held out a hope that he might soon be able to use his clemency in their favour.

It is reported in Rome that the French have occupied a point on the Red Sea near Rahebia. The Italians strongly protest against this action.

A Paris Correspondent states that the Government will give a free hand to the Court of Cassation in the Dreyfus case, and as a consequence the secret dossier will be examined. Two barristers are about to leave France for Cayenne to advise the prisoner in the preparation of his defence.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Manchester has given rise to a good deal of comment. The «Courrier du Soir» states that M. Paul Cambon, the new French Ambassador to Great Britain, had a long interview yesterday with Mr. Delcassé, Minister of Foreign Affairs. His Excellency will shortly proceed to take up his new post, with instructions not to initiate any special action, nor to enter into conversations on the matter at present at issue between France and Great Britain.

Mr. Chamberlain spent a busy day in Manchester yesterday. After luncheon with the Lord Mayor, he visited the Royal Exchange in the afternoon, briefly addressing the members on the unity of purpose which marked the nation at the present juncture of foreign affairs. In the evening he dined at the Conservative Club. Here he declared that the difficulties the Government had had to deal with had not arisen from the misdeeds of this or a previous Government, but were due to the progress of geography and the filling in of the map of Africa. STORM-WORK.

(A SHORT STORY)

"Why don't you marry her, sir?" she asked. "She'd make you a good wife."

Nesta heard, and flushed to the roots of her hair. She shot a horrified glance at Ingram, and then turned her back on him.

Betty having made her suggestion was content to leave it, and now rose sulkily, and looked across to, measuring the distance to be traversed with her old, painful limbs.

"I'll take you," he said gently. He stopped and picked up the little old figure, and before Betty could accomplish her respectful remonstrance, he had carried her across the uneven floor, and set her carefully down by the teapot.

Bertie was troubled with no such fluctuations of feeling; he adored Major Ingram with a boy's ardent hero-worship, and was never happier than when he could induce him to walk or ride with him.

"If your sister is not tired," Nesta was in gracious mood. "Not a bit. I'm a country girl, you know, and it takes a lot to tire me, doesn't it, Bertie?"

"Yes, Oh, she isn't a bad walker for a girl," replied Bertie, with a kind patronage. Half an hour's walk brought them to the building.

They dutifully explored the ruins, then ascended the remaining battlements, and stood looking out on the view.

"This is better than India," said Ingram, breaking it at last; "it is good to be at home again, and laying his strong brown hand on Nesta's little gloved fingers, as they rested on the stone wall before her, he added: "And it is better still to be with old friends again."

The girl flushed slightly, but did not move. Ingram looked at her a minute, then he said softly: "What should a man do if the friend for whom he cares most is cold to him?"

Nesta suddenly raised her head, and gave the Major a long, wistful look that puzzled him as she had puzzled him sometimes before; then the wilfulness changed to resentment, and she pulled her hand away with a quick passion.

Just then, Bertie appeared on a tower still left standing. "Come up here," he shouted, "it's stunning; you get a much better view of the country all round. I'll show you the way, it's quite easy."

Ingram was not grateful for the interruption, but Nesta turned and almost ran towards her brother, and he could but follow. Bertie exhibited to his heart's content, and presently marched them round to the obelisk, which was in a much better state of preservation than the rest of the building.

"That tower doesn't look too safe," he remarked, glancing up at the old bell-tower.

"No," replied Bertie; "they say it isn't, and that it ought to be taken down, or else the next big gale may bring it down with a rush. It is said that Charles the Second hid there one night. I expect the weight of Royalty was too much for it. That poor chap must have had a lively time of it, there's hardly an old building in Sussex where he didn't hide, from all accounts."

"Better put a stone against the door, Bertie," said the Major, as they entered. "See, the catch on the door is gone, and it can only be opened from outside."

the door to keep it open. "Well, that has only just happened, then; last time I was here it was all right. I say, Nesta, this wouldn't be a cheerful place to spend the night in, now, would it?"
