PASSING NOTES.
The present lull in matters political, financial and administrative is, we have every reason to think, more apparent than real, thus differing considerably from the period immediately preceding the nomination of the new Ministry and the opening of the new Chambers. From all accounts the new Ministers are attending to their duties most energetically, making themselves acquainted with the details of their offices, working off the heavy accumulation of matter gathered during the three months stagnation preceding their appointment, and comparing notes for future conduct. Naturally they have not yet had time to form a decided programme or introduce any radical measures, but there are solid grounds for the hope that, in due time, they will acquit themselves well, and prove themselves worthy of the confidence felt in them. The previous ministry of Dr. Herrera, though not altogether composed of unsuitable elements, was a thorough failure, and its distinguishing features were inefficiency and neglect. Notwithstanding the urgent claims of the situation, they neither introduced nor enforced one useful or energetic measure, unless the financial measures for the bolstering up of the National Bank may be termed such. So far as the good of the Republic was concerned, affairs were quite as much at a standstill during their term of office as they were during the three following months in which the portfolios remained vacant. We will pay them the compliment of imagining that this was more due to incompatibility of opinions than to personal inefficiency, but the fact remains that they greatly resembled the dog in the manger, in that they would neither move themselves nor would they allow any one else to move. Worse than this the present Ministry can hardly turn out, and we have every hopes that they will prove far better—if they only last.

The new Chambers seem settling down to their work. So far the measures brought before them have only been of secondary or local importance, but so far as it is possible to judge, there is every disposition to discuss matters fairly and on their merits. The Senators have as yet had very little to do, so that they have not held many sittings. It is to be hoped both Chambers will avoid that frequent occurrence of "no quorum" which reached such a scandalous pitch during the latter days of the previous Chambers. Whatever exception may be taken to the manner in which the present Chambers were elected, we have no reason for supposing that they will prove either much worse or much better than their predecessors. Until there is a radical reform, not merely in the manner of conducting the elections, but also in the habits and ways of thinking of the electors, it will be useless to look for Chambers constituted in a different manner to the present. On the whole, then, we think their acts may be anticipated without any dismal foreboding, and should be judged without unnecessary prejudice.

Without wishing to cast any imputation on that useful and hard-working department, the Direction General de Estadística, we would point out that the Port returns furnished by them are rather deceptive. For instance, in those for February, published yesterday, it is stated that only 3 English passengers arrived during that month. This is manifestly erroneous. Roughly looking through the passenger lists of the Royal Mail and Pacific Steam Navigation Companies, as given in our columns, we find the names of some 16 or 18 first class English arrivals, independent of those coming second or third class or by other lines. The explanation may probably be found in the large number, some 38 per cent of the whole, assigned in the returns to "other nationalities." We think it would be good thing if the Direction de Estadística were to show a little more discrimination in this particular. It can not entail any great extra trouble to obtain the nationality of the passengers at the same time as the other particulars, nor is such an enquiry liable to give offence to the most sensitive, whilst greater accuracy in this particular would render the statistics far more valuable.

NEWS OF THE DAY

MONTEVIDEO
SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1891.
Saints Matilde and Florentina. A 2-military flying shot, 1757. King Humbert of Italy born, 1844. 73 days past, 292 to the end of the year.

Parliament.
In the Chamber of Representatives, on Thursday, Sr. Gil presented a Bill for the transfer to the Direction General of the Civil Registry the duties ascribed by the Law of Feb. 1879, to the Scriveners' Offices of Government and Finance. This was referred to the Committee of Legislation, with a request that it might be studied at the same time as a similar bill presented last session by Sr. A. M. Rodríguez.

At request of the same Committee it was resolved to ask the Executive for further antecedents relative to the claim of Mr. R. R. Pealer for seizure of the concession of the Minas railway.

The Bill recommended by the Committee of Finance, establishing a Customs office in the port of Concepción, Colonia, and extending various privileges to colonists, was brought forward, and was approved in general, after a few unimportant remarks.

A Bill authorising the E. P. to satisfy the claim of Sr. Escobar for $4000 for damages to property caused by military movements, was approved in general. The amount originally claimed was $10,000. The sitting then concluded.

Solis Theatre.
We remind lovers of the Shakespearean drama of the performance of "King Lear" by Sr. Emmanuel and his company, this evening. The tragedy has not been played here for some twenty years, and we hope to see many English faces amongst the audience. The production is evidently awaking considerable interest for yesterday's Siglo devotes over three columns to a description of the plot.

The Executive Power has addressed a Message to the General Assembly asking that body to give prompt attention and resolution to the treaties of International Private Right agreed upon in the South American Congress held in this city some time back, and which, it appears, have not yet received due Legislative sanction.

Prohibition.
A decree has been issued from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs absolutely forbidding diplomatic agents of the Republic to make any publications respecting the internal service of their offices, without previous consent of the Government. The first infraction of this will cause a reprimand, and a repetition of the offence will be considered an omission of duty.

Doubtless this decree has been provoked by the letter recently published by Dr. Alberto Nin, Oriental Minister in London, which letter gave rise to many unfavourable comments.

Railway.
The Siglo states that the Extension of the Central Railway to San Fructuoso is now complete, and that Government has been asked to inspect previous to opening the line for public service.
The report that the daily service to Durazno was to be suspended is denied.
The works for the extension of Nio Perez branch to Cerro Largo are to be commenced very shortly.

SUNDRIES.

Apart from the situation, which, though stale, is ever present, the topic of the day is the unusual and prolonged heat. We are within a week of Autumn, but the weather is that we are generally accustomed to in late December or early January. Some hopes of a breaking storm were aroused on Tuesday afternoon, but were not fulfilled, and the heat yesterday was more oppressive than ever without any promise of abatement. Even well acclimatised residents find it uncommonly trying and if it lasts much longer it may give rise to much sickness. The camps are again complaining of drought.

The betting continues strongly in favour of Guarrillero for the Premio Artigas to-morrow, so much so that no other horse comes near him in the auctions.
Easter Eve (March 28) will be celebrated by a grand masked ball to be held in the French Hall in calle Arapey, the proceeds being for the benefit of the French Benevolent Fund. Some prominent French residents are on the Committee, and knowing the aptitude of our French friends for this sort of thing, the affair promises to be a great success. It is also probable that some of the leading clubs will give balls in Easter week.

"You are as bad as a playful kitten in jumping at conclusions," remarked Keedick to his wife. "Do kittens jump at conclusions?" asked Mrs. Keedick. "Certainly; have you never seen kittens chase their tails?"

As melancholy a piece of news as any we have heard for a long time is that relating to the Prado. Sr. Adolfo del Campo has issued a notice to the effect that, the Municipal Board not having paid for nor appropriated the Eucalyptus avenue and the bridge giving approach to the Prado, these will be closed to the public from the 20th instant, and ingress only allowed by calle Lucas Obes, and thence only to proprietors. If enforced, this would have the effect of entirely closing the popular and picturesque Prado as a public resort, but we hear that the Board has already challenged Sr. del Campo's right to take such a step, and intends referring the matter to the lawyers. To close the Prado in this fashion would indeed be a public loss, and we sincerely hope it will be averted.

Gold closed yesterday at 125 1/2 according to which the paper dollar is worth 79.7 cents.

"Juan Moreira" will be repeated at the Politeama this evening. "Juan Cuello" will be produced tomorrow.

The author of "Trooper and Redskin" vouches for the following specimen of "culture" in the Par West:—"Society, among our neighbours over the way, was in a very crude state. Tradition says that a Helene girl was once asked by a Boston young lady if they had any culture out West. 'Culture?' she replied; 'you bet your variegated socks. We can sling more culture to the square inch than they can in any camp in America. Culture? Just loosen my corset till I smile.'"

An opera by a Brazilian composer has just been produced in Rio Janeiro with the strange title Dag Jargal. We presume the plot is of an entomological nature.

The reception of General Mitre and Bishop Soler is transferred to Tuesday next, the 17th instant, as the arrival of the steamer Alfonso XIII has been purposely retarded, to allow the Committee from Buenos Aires to attend the Municipal elections held there to-morrow.

There will be a cricket match to-morrow, we believe between the Eleven and Twenty-two, providing enough men can be got together. The teams are not yet fixed. We believe this is the last formal match of the season, excepting the International (return) Match with Buenos Aires, which will take place there during the Easter holidays.

Sr. J. M. Saenz, the police Inspector of the 1st section, who was brutally murdered by a soldier on Thursday morning, while in discharge of his duty, had made himself much respected during the short time he was in the force. His funeral took place yesterday morning and was largely attended by his companions and neighbors. Previous to entering the force he was well known in commercial circles.

A youth named Juan Sabio was playing at ball in an alley in the Aguada, on Thursday afternoon, with some companions, and rashly went over the wall into the adjoining quinta to search for a lost ball. Sr. Angel Buschisso, brother of the owner of the quinta, doubtless mistaking the intruder's intentions, fired at him with a revolver, shooting him in the left leg. The doctors have extracted the ball, but declare the wound severe. His assailant has been arrested.

President or Dictator Balmaceda of Chile has refused the offers of mediation made by the Oriental and Argentine Governments. He prefers civil war and shedding the blood of his countrymen.

The Municipal Board has entered a case of slander against the Montevideo Noticias for accusing it of mal-administration of funds.

Enrique Adamines, machinist of L'Italia has died in the Hospital from dagger wounds inflicted on him by the woman Sara Rodriguez, in a quarrel four days ago. She is under arrest.

The Dia, states that the contract for the Brazilian loan was signed on the 2nd instant, but that one of the conditions was that the terms should be kept secret for 10 days. That period having elapsed, we may now look for some official information on the subject. We believe the loan is for 3 million dollars, with option of 2 million more, and bearing interest at 9 per cent. The principal to be repaid within 18 months.

BUENOS AIRES.
Three Italians have been arrested for having in their possession 1902 forged notes in imitation of $50 notes of the National Bank. They were discovered through one of them tendering a $50 in a shop in Calle Pavon between Buen Orden and Lima, in payment for a pair of salpargatas, but he was such an ill-looking individual that the shopkeeper would not change the note, but followed the man, who joined two others in Plaza Constitucion, and all three went into a tavern in Lima 1755, where it was proved that they were lodging. The shopkeeper then gave notice to the police and the three men were at once arrested.

The director of the Mining Department reports that the value of the gold extracted from the Republic in 1890 is estimated at $83,893 and of silver at $469,794.

The Herold observes that General Mitre is put down as a subscriber to the loan, but of course the General himself knows nothing of the matter, seeing that he has not been near land for a week.

On Tuesday afternoon, a young man called General Roca's house and gave the porter a letter and a small parcel to be delivered to the General immediately. The porter handed them to Lt. Col. Latorre, the General's aide-de-camp, who found that the parcel contained a dagger and that the letter was a challenge to fight the writer with that weapon, he possessing a similar one. He was handed over to a policeman and taken to the Comisaria, and the result of his examination by the Judge of Instruction, Dr. Diaz, was the arrest of nine other persons, including two women.

Messrs. John G. Meigs and Co. have been authorized to transfer to the Argentine Inter-provincial Railway Company Limited their concession for making and working a railway, with a guarantee, from San Juan to Chumbicha.

A circular has been issued by the private Banks inviting the public to subscribe to the loan, which, they say, will prevent a greater depreciation of the paper currency, "the cause of so much injury to all, rich as well as poor."

The Banks will receive subscriptions for any sum, not less than $75, the price of a bond, which is payable $25 down, $25 on April 2nd and $25 on May 2nd.

The total amount of the bonds applied for up to Wednesday morning was $25,203,250, which would produce a sum of $18,936,940, but the subscription includes $4,000,000 by six private banks which are waiting for the sanction of their directors in Europe.

Committees have been named to make a house-to-house collection of subscriptions. Subscriptions have been opened in all the branches of the National and Provincial Banks. The Bank of Italy has sent out 6000 circulars announcing the conditions of the subscription.

A large number of telegrams have been sent to Europe, and especially to London, recommending the loan to capitalists.
It is stated that the broker Seim has made the first operation in the bonds by buying $10,000 for the end of May at 82 1/2. This announcement is made, it may be supposed, to induce people to make a rush to buy the bonds at 75.

Placards are being posted up in all public places inviting the people to subscribe to the loan.
It is stated that the English Bank and the London and Brazilian Bank have received telegrams from London authorizing them to subscribe for bonds to the amount of $1,000,000 and $500,000 respectively.

The transference or assimilation of the Carabassa Bank by the London and River Plate Bank was one of the principal topics of conversation to-day. One of our oldest and leading private banks, it is no wonder that the news should have created widespread interest, and although, of course, Carabassa's Bank will still figure prominently in the market, the change marks a fresh departure in banking circles. The history of the bank is interesting. It was founded in 1858 by Mr. Jose de Carabassa, who had arrived in the country some years previously with the small fortune of 15,000 dollars in his pocket and an extensive knowledge of commercial transaction gained in France and England. He was first occupied as a book keeper by Mr. Bernabe Ocampo, but afterwards turned broker, in this capacity forming a large circle of friends and customers, who later on formed the nucleus of his bank.

Started in 1853, the bank offices were opened at the corner of San Martin and Cangallo, a site now occupied by a bank-blocking establishment. Thence after a time the offices were changed to the property in San Martin now occupied by Funes and Lagos' auction mart, subsequently to Mr. Carabassa's private residence in Calle Cangallo, between Maipu and Florida, and finally to its present handsome and commodious edifice.
Mr. J. Corti, who died, last year, was a partner in the bank from the first moment, and a partner of Mr. Carabassa when the latter was a broker. As to the capital of the bank, it has always been kept under reserve though known to be superior to the amount registered under the Free Banking Act, which was three millions paper and two millions gold. Mr. Carabassa, who is now sixty years of age, will not, it is thought, retire from business altogether, as it is reported that in company with his three sons he will start a new firm. As a trait of his commercial life and habits it is said that having been asked to what he attributed the great credit accorded him by the public, he replied: "to my principle of never telling anyone who came to collect an account Vuelva Va. mas tarde."—B. A. Standard.

PHOTOGRAPHING IN COLOURS.
(The Paris Correspondent of the Daily News, writes as follows, February 10).—
The scientific world has been startled by the announcement made by M. Lippmann (Professor of Physics at the Sorbonne), at the last sitting of the Academy of Sciences, of a new process of photography discovered by him, by which colours throughout the whole range of the spectrum can be reproduced on a sensitive plate, just as accurately (since colours are but numbers of light waves) as outline or shadow are fixed by the present photographic negatives and prints. M. Lippmann's first attempts to take coloured photographs have not gone beyond the experimental stage, and a long time must elapse before this branch of photography is brought to the perfection which its sister branch has attained. After a few weeks' attempts, M. Lippmann has succeeded in photographing a stained window-colours as brilliant as the original ones. His researches, however, quite apart from the magnificent possibilities which they bring within our view, claim the regard of every scientist as an illustration of the power of the inductive method.

M. Lippmann, whom I met yesterday at his laboratory at the Sorbonne, very obligingly showed me his coloured plates and gave me an account of his discovery. The plates were all photographs of the solar spectrum. All the colours of the rainbow were there, including the infra-red and the ultra-violet, invisible to our eyes. The plates, however, had registered them and kept an impression of them, showing themselves in this respect superior to the human eye. These two mysterious colours were represented in their proper places by two distinct stripes, apparently of a jet-black colour. I say apparently because it was only our imperfect vision which made them seem so to us, their real colours, of course, being infra-red and ultra-violet. The other colours between these two red, orange, green, blue, &c.—were as vivid as any objects in nature. As I was examining these plates an assistant came to say that a coloured photograph, the first of a stained window, had just been taken out of the developing bath, and was in splendid condition. The stained window, as I saw on proceeding to the dark room, was a most primitive affair, four pieces of coloured glass, green, yellow, red, and blue, soldered together. "This is all we could put together," explained M. Lippmann, "but it is quite sufficient for my purpose." The plate, which was not yet fixed, was taken out of its box for a few seconds and only, as this plate was precious, and we were afraid of injuring it by exposure even to candle light. To our great delight the colours were there, and rendered with photographic faithfulness. A second plate was undergoing exposure, the image of the stained-glass design being thrown upon it by means of a sort of magic lantern lighted by electricity.

Before explaining why a mirror placed on the back of a sensitive plate during exposure causes the silver precipitate to assume all the colors thrown upon it by the camera, the reader must be assumed to have some slight acquaintance with photography, and also with the laws of light, which offer a striking parallel to the laws of sound.

In other words, there are five thousand waves of yellow light to an inch, &c. A curious property of sound or light waves is that when they meet another wave of equal length coming in an opposite direction the conflicting waves overlap each other, the continuity is broken, and a succession of dark and light, or silent and loud, intervals is produced.

Some time ago it occurred to M. Lippmann that if, instead of a continuous wave of light crossing the photographic plate, a broken line (produced by interference) were sent across it, the silver, instead of being precipitated in one mass throughout the gelatin-bromide, would settle in layers (about the thickness of the soap bubble). By placing a looking-glass behind the plate, the red light, for instance, caused the silver to be deposited in layers of half the thickness of a red wave length.

COMMERCIAL

Stock Exchange Montevideo, March 13, 1891. Closing quotations. Gold, cash, 124 1/2. Unifed cash, 52.

The market was rather dull to-day, prices continue weak and uncertain, though closing much as yesterday. Little was done in gold, which opened 126 1/2, falling gently to close in second ring at 124 1/2, $8,800 sold, 5 operations.

National Bank shares opened at 23 3/4 cash, presently falling to 23 1/4. They then rallied, rising quietly, until in second ring they closed 25 cash, 25 1/2 for end of month, a rise of 1 1/2 on yesterday, 4170 sold.

The Third Time.

(A SHORT STORY.)

"Charlie," said Mrs. Charles Lawrence, joyfully, "Helen writes that she will be here this evening--so then our party will be complete."

"And who may Helen be?" inquired Colonel Ashly; one of the numerous guests seated at the Lawrence's breakfast table.

"Helen is a fetish of my wife's," answered Charles Lawrence, laughing. "According to her, Helen is as beautiful as the day, wise as Minerva, and, above all, as rich as Croesus."

"Strange to say I have never seen this female paragon. She has been abroad ever since our marriage. And really I had begun to look upon her as a sort of Mrs. Harris, but she is actually coming in the flesh this evening, and I perceive that the prospect has quite taken away my wife's appetite."

"Oh, you can't think how delighted I am!" cried Mrs. Lawrence, enthusiastically. "It has seemed so strange and unnatural that the two beings I love most in the world should have never met. You will all fall in love with Miss Greville, I know. She will be here in time for dinner, and comes to the race ball with us to-night."

The Lawrence were entertaining a large party of friends at the Peel, their Lancashire home, a lovely old place almost on the borders of Westmoreland. It had belonged to the family for generations, and had originally been a keep. From the outside it appeared an almost colossal edifice, but inside, although there were rooms in abundance, none could boast of any very grand proportions.

This was accounted for by the fact that the walls (being built for purposes of defence) were nine or ten feet in thickness. The windows and doors, therefore, were all set in deep recesses, which added greatly to the quaint appearance of the house.

Charles Lawrence loved every inch of the old place, and though it had been only a few years in his possession, had already done much to restore and improve it. He had not been married very long, and had chosen for his wife sweet Lettice Adrian, an almost penniless girl, who had seen nothing of the world.

They were very happy together, and being without care or trouble of any kind, enjoyed life and its pleasures thoroughly. It was their delight to attend every sort of festivity in the neighbourhood, and to fill their house with young people as capable of enjoying them as themselves.

They had already had a week of balls, theatricals, and dinner parties, and were going to give a dance themselves. The house contained accommodation for almost any number of guests, but Mrs. Lawrence had prepared a small room communicating with her own for Miss Greville--anticipating some cosy midnight talks over old times while the gentlemen were yet in the smoking room.

During all that day little was talked about but this coming guest, and many were the questions put to Mrs. Lawrence concerning her. She was only too delighted to answer them and to discourse upon her friend's beauty, her charm of manner, her generous mind, her wealth, and, most wonderful of all, her unspoilable nature and simplicity of character.

Greatly to every one's disappointment, the dressing bell rang before the expected visitor arrived.

"Anybody can manage to look nice in the evening," said Miss Stocker to Colonel Ashly, rather acidly, "but to come straight off a long cold journey into a crowded, well-lighted room would have been a severe test for even this nineteenth-century Helen."

But the colonel thought she would have come through such an ordeal well, when she entered the drawing room before dinner with Lettice Lawrence clinging to her arm. She, like the rest of the ladies, was in her ball dress--undoubtedly the most becoming of toilets to those who are in their first youth; but it was of some costly silken material, more suitable to her tall, finely moulded form than the tulle and net worn by her companions.

Her features were regular, but not severely so; the eyes dark and lustrous, with heavy curling lashes; the mouth, perhaps a trifle large, but very sweet and womanly, with a tiny dimple hiding near it; her small head was crowned with a mass of ruddy brown hair, twisting and curling in delicious rings and waves; two large diamond stars blazed amongst them, and chains of the same jewels clasped her white neck and encircled her perfect arms.

On any other girl or twenty they might have appeared unsuitable, or ostentatious, but Helen Greville wore them like the queen she looked. She was only the daughter of a Liverpool merchant, but no fine Norman blood could flush and pale more beautifully than did that in Helen's cheek as she thanked her host for his hearty welcome and spoke of her love for her school friend of but a few years ago. That this was warmly returned was evident by Lettice's flushed, delighted face as she smiled at her friend from the head of the long dinner table.

Before the meal was concluded most of the guests, male and female, were ready to own that Miss Greville's charms had not been overrated, whatever her former might have been. Colonel Ashly, to whose lot it had fallen to take the beautiful heiress in to dinner, was already numbered amongst her captives, and, to do him justice, would have been equally enslaved had Helen been a penniless dependent. Her bright, gracious manner and quick intelligence and the ready smile that shone alike for either sex, won all hearts, and there was a triumphant "I told you so" about Mrs. Lawrence as she gazed the signal for the ladies' departure.

As they gathered round the fire in the drawing room, one of the ladies remarked upon the size and brilliancy of Helen's diamonds, which were indeed most gorgeous to behold. For better examination, Miss Greville undraped the necklace from her white neck. It was a rivière of large single stones, and worth, as Lettice remarked, a comfortable fortune. Each was detachable from its fellows, and could be made into a pin for the hair or dress.

"My dear Helen," said her hostess, laughing, "I could not sleep in my bed if I possessed those stones. Are you not afraid to travel about with them? Here, put them on again; they make me quite nervous."

"So saying, she tried to fasten the ornament on her friend's neck; as she did so the clasp slipped from her fingers and the neck-lace fell to the ground.

"How clumsy of me, Nellie," she cried in dismay. "See, one of the stones has come unfastened and rolled away. Here, Lambert," to the butler who had just entered with coffee. "Bring a light at once. Miss Greville has lost a diamond; let nobody move lest it should be trodden on. What do you do with your jewels at night, Nellie? Shall Charlie put them in the safe?"

"Thank you, dear," was the reply, "but it's really not worth while. To tell the truth I generally sleep with them round my neck when I am away from home. I must confess they are a great responsibility to me. They are the gift of my dear father, and he would be hurt if I did not wear them on all possible occasions. I am not nervous, as you know, but I take every reasonable precaution for the safety of my jewels."

"Can you not find the diamond, Lambert?" said Lettice, anxiously; it cannot have rolled far.

"Here it is, miss," replied the man, respectfully handing it to Helen. "It is hidden by the rug. I do not think it is any the worse."

"Helen thanked him and fastened it among its fellows. "What a charming butler you have got, Letty," she said, as the man left.
