-Telegrams over the Cuban question are bewildering, as usual. Those from Madrid, apparently corroborated by some from other parts of Europe, entirely con-firm the statement that Spain and the United States have agreed to accept the mediation of the Pope. This step, we understand, has been taken at the direct soli-citation of the Queen Regent, the only reservation made being that Spain will not accept the independence of Cuba, and the first probable step being the suspension of hostilities in the island. The effect in Spain is represented as both good and bad, that is to say the moderates are pleased and the war party exas-perated. The news is said to have a good effect in the Madrid, Lon-donand European Stock Exchan--In most absolute contradiction to the above, Washington te-legrams deny most positively, and cite presidential and offi-cial authority for doing so, that the United Status has accepted or the United States has accepted or Will accept the mediation of the Pope or of any European potentate. The mere idea has, they say been rejected with an explosion of indignation throughout the Union. —In the face of such contradic-tions as the above, it is impossible to know how the matter stands, but there seems little doubt that the tala of mediation has been believed in Europe. What is awaited now is Mr. Mckinley's Message, and about this also the telegrams are hopelessly conlus-velling. —The following will be of great interest to our friends of the Methodist Church .- In making his local appointments at the Annual Method-ist Conference held in Rosario, Bishop Warren has allocated Dr. J. T. Thomson to the charge of the Spanish Church in this eity, Mr. Tallon junior continuing at the Aguada and Rev. J. P. Gil-liband being named to the English Church. Dr. Thomson is well known here as a preacher of repute and his appointment will be welcomed by a large circle of acquantances. The Rev. Gilliland, we are informed, is thus far unknown in the River Plate. The Conference having completed its duties, Bishop Warren will continue his tour, visiting the sever-al missionary charges in the River al missionary charges in the River Plate and may be expected to preach and lecture in this city the last week in the month, of which due notice will be giv-en by advertisement.-We may add on our own account that Dr. Thomson is a brilliant lecturer and debater, and it is hoped he will still up the intellectual life of the community.

-At Levallois-Perret, near Paris there lived until quite recently a man who was a conformed dipso-maniac, so much so that he had several times been put under res-traint by his relatives The last time be came out he seems to have been greatly impressed by representa-tions which were made to him as to the evils of drinking. From that moment, by a perverse sort of inter-pretation of the good advice he had received, he determined to drink nothing at all, not even water. At the end of ten days, during which he had not a drop of drink of any sort, he was found dead in his room. This man, who had consumed so much liquid in his time, died literally of thirst.

on making his appearance in a private box. Finally the pro-ceedings became so outrageous that Sr. Dominguez gave orders to the police in attendance to arrest two young men who distinguished themselves as ringleaders, Solsona themselves as ringleaders, Solsona y Flores and Agustin Fernandez Fisterra. This gave rise to a gener-al fight, and the police had great difficulty in executing the order and clearing the theatre. The tumult continued outside and several persons, including a reporter of the Razon, were assaulted and more or less hurt. Revolvers were fired, though fortunately without effect. The riot alarmed the whole neighbourhood and it was some time be fore order was restored and the crowd dispersed, several persons having been arrested. Sr. Domin-guez himself had to fight his way out of the building with his fists. Later in the evening General Amuedo and a few respectable persons who had formed the Com-mittee called on Sr. Dominguez to express their regret at the disord-ers that had occurred. The Dia makes the explanation. which we believe to be a correct one, that there is a group of some 200 or 250 «collectivists,» many of them recruited from the disorderly classes, who are systematic-ally attending political metings with the object of creating disorder and falsifying the elections of sectional committees, and that it these alone who are responsible for the disorders and disreputable scenes that have lately occurred, If this be the case, which should not be difficult of proof, it is incumbent both on the Government and on the leaders of the «colorado» party to take stern measures to repress them, for their conduct is equally dangerous to public order and to political organisation. The scenes of Sunday and Monday were as inexcusable as they were dis-graceful and are simply another proof of the utterly reckless and disreputable character of Julio Herrera's followers, who cannot even respect public order and reeven respect public order and re-cognise no argument but the stick and the revolver. If a few of them were sent to cool their ardor in the Penitentiary for a few weeks it would be wholesome discipline

POLIFICAL NOTES,

We note that the Argentine Society for the Protection of Animals has presented a petition against the restoration of bull-lights, sin homage to the culture and civilisation of the Republic.» It is rather shameful that no local Society or even an individual has been found to take the initiative.

The «electoral accord» still remains in statu quo. The «blanco» delegates have not yet agreed on what terms they will present, and it is quite possible that they have necessarily been reduced, but will put forward two separate with the removal of the causes in-

But if he does so, he must not look for any protection from Italy, which is strictly neutral in such matters. This we take to be the meaning of the orrollar, and we do not very well see how the Italian government could take up any other attitude, unless it means to be drawn into unnecessary wars. .

The above paragraph, which is quoted from the Review of the River Plate of the 2nd instant, although addressing itself to Foreigners, to wit the Italians, in Chili and Argentina, seems ap-plicable in part language to the case now interesting F. C. C. Employees and might, I think, a transmosed in the following be transposed in the following terms.

his Circularof March 30 points out, That it is the duty of Oitizens of the country whilst serving the interests of the Railway Company to observe an attitude of strict neutrality as regards public expression of their personal views on the politic-al questions of the day and especially to abstain from fostering objectionable agitation of party feeling.»

This advice thus officially notified has caused comment in some of the local press, which is inclined to consider it an interference with personal liberty. We confess we do not understand the objection. The liberty of the «Hijo del pais» remains unimpaired, he can join any revolutionary movement if he likes or he can give his services if he chooses to favor any party dispute, but if he does so he must not look for protection from the strictlyneutralCompany, which pays his for services and therefore has a prior claim on the same free from the inevitable distraction of politic-

Such figures have an eloquence of their own. on which it is unnecessary to dwell. DISGRACEFUL POLITICAL DISORDERS, The disorderly scenes of Sun-day were complemented on Monday night by a still more disgraceful tumult which, we are glad to say, has received the severe and unanimous censure of all our native contemporaries, as it well deserves. A meeting of «co-lorados» of the 7th section had been convoked in the Stella d'Italia theatre, under the presidency of General Amuedo. At an early honor the little theatre was packed with a gathering that had evidently gone here for the purpose of creating a disturbance, and some of whom overflowed into the neighbouring streets. It is stated on good authority that few of these were residents of the section where the meeting was held, whilst nearly all of them were «collectivists» from all parts of the city, and not a few probably "marcianos" hired to create dis-order. From first to last pro-ceedings were farcical and dis-orderly, those present giving <vivas" for Sr. Cuestas, for the Council of State, for the electoral accord, and for everything decent and respectable. POLITICS AND FOREIGNERS.

An esteemed Subscriber sends us the following for publication, and we have pleasure in printing it, as it gives the other view of a question which has been much dis-cussed by our contemporaries in the last few days .-

«The spread eagle attitude of Ital-iane on both sides of the Cordilleras has apparently been the reason for the circular addressed by the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs to Italian legations and consulates, in which he points out that it is the duty of loyal Italians to observe an attitude known as the forward policy was essential if we were to retain our hold on India. Forty years ago the policy of non-interference with the border tribes might have been prudent; now circumstances had completely changed. Russia was our near neighbour. We were bound in horour to protect Afghan-istan, and it consequently became a matter of the gravest necessity that we should extend our influence over the tribes in the centre of our frontier, and that we should let the Alghans see that we were prepared to go to their assistance should occasion arise.

Lord Onslow, Under-Secretary for India, pointed to the financial cost which would be imposed by the course Lord Roberts urged. The policy of the Government, as distinctly laid down, was to avoid any extension of administrative control over the tribes. The maintenance of the Khyber Pass was of great advance to British prestige, and instructions had been given that the Indian Government might take whatever steps were necess-ary to keep the Kbyber Pass open for caravans or for the send-ing of troops through it should we be called upon to do so. The Earl of Northbrook, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Ripon, and others followed, the last-named urging that the true strength ot the Indian frontier lay in the inde-pendence of the border tribes.

Questions were addressed to Mr. Curzon in the House of Commons as to Russia's reported pro-posal to occupy and annex Deer Island, opposite Fusan; as to the strengthening of the forts of Port Arthur; and the cession of the country surrounding that Port. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9.

Her Majesty the Queen, who was to have left Windsor for the South of France to-day, has postponed her departure for a day on account of slight indisposition. News of the postponement caused some excitement in City and other circles yesterday, but the publication of an official intimation that her Majesty had recovered, and was able to drive out yesterday alternoon speedily allayed public anxiety. A short sitting of the House of Lords was held yesterday. Reply-ing to Earl Beauchamp, the Bishop of London gave particulars of the progress of the scheme for the union of the parish of St. George, Botolph-lane, with that of St. Maryat-Hill.

In the House of Commons, the Southwark and Vauxhall Water Bill was read a second time. Mr. Curzon announced that telegrams of inquiry had been addressed to Pekin and St. Petersburg as to Russia's reported demand for a lense of Port Arthur. Mr. Balfour stated that the second reading of the Irish Local Government Bill would be moved on Monday week. Mr. Long introduced a Bill to consolidate and amend enact-ments relating to dogs. Attention was called by resolution to the urgent need for improved harbour accommodation for fishermen on the coasts of the United Kingdom, . the Ministerial majority on a division falling to twenty. A BIT OF A HUMBUG. (A SHORT STORY)

(Continued) «Oh, then,» decided Christis phil-osophically, «of course it can't be helped. Atter all, Kit, you know your own business best. Now, how foolish of me! I've wasted this nice piece of bread; my wits must have been wool-gathering for me to mis-take the mustard for butter. Never mind! But area if, there is no meritake the mustard for butter. Never mind! But even if there is no way out of it if you are fond of him, and yet have to keep him starms' length, it won't make it a scrap easier for you to feel that it was his fault more than yours. You will feel it just the same because — oh, women are so unreasonable! In little things, I mean — little things like this love worry of yours—not in the serious affairs of life. You don't agree with me?» I pushed baok my obair, and went

I pushed back my chair, and went to sit by the fire. I put up my hand as if to shade my face from the heat ----in reality, I was only hiding it from Christie from Christie. «I know of a case,» said Christie, with abominable obseriness, «where the woman had to give up a man she was ridiculously fond of, she never regretted it. No,» repeated Christie, nodding her head convincingly, «she neves exterted it). «Oh!» I murmured limply; «didn't

she? Why?» "Well, it was like this, . Christie explained, eating the tart as if she really liked it; athis woman was engaged for years and years to a man she was absurd enough to sin-cerely care for. He was clever and bockwormy; so to please him-to make herself worthy of him, she said absolver too She works. -she became clever, too. She work-ed all day, and half the night, not because she liked it, but because he bad a fancy that when he was well enough off to marry, he would like his wife to be on an intellectual plane with bimself. After years and years-goodness knows how long-she did tell me, but I am so bad at figures!-she made a name for herfigures!-she made a name for her-self, by-oh, by some work she did; and he made enough money to be able to offer her a comfortable home. But it never came to anything; he was too honourable to ask for his release, but he was thoroughly tired of her, and she, being no fool, tound this ont. She was oldish then, and the work which she had done and the work which she had done and the work which she had done for his sake, had given her wrinkles and taken away any traces of come-liness she ever had. He had quite ceased to delight in feminine intel-lectuality, and was not quite clever shough to conceal the fact. The end of it must hat make the fact. of it was that my little iziend jilted him heartlessly — threw over the man who had, for her sake, worked late and early — proved false to the lover who for long, weary years had been only faithful to her. It was a shameful state of affairs, and their mutual friends-not unnaturally mutual friends-not unnaturally -wared very indignant over her pitiless treatment of a man for whose love any woman should have been only too thanktul. She got cut by a good many people, and he married the girl.» "What girl?» I asked with grow-

«What girl?» I asked with grow-ing interest. «The girl he cared for, > answered Christie. «Didn't I tell yon that my friend was not an idiot? She saw how things were, and — she had a stu-pid, owlish fancy that she would like to spare the man's feelings, break off the management, and so leave him free to be happy in his own way. His conscience might have pricked him, you know, if he had even guess-ed that she knew his secret.» ed that she knew his secret.»

«What a brute he must have been!» I cried indignantly. «Why did he let bimself fall in love with any one else?>

I yawned drowsily, made sure that Tom's letter was still beneath my pillow, and was just succumbing to the soothing influence of my hostess's English Drapery Store billow, and was just adcombing to the soothing influence of my hostess's monotonous murmurings, when — «So stupid and forgetful of mel Of course, the point of the story was all against her, and in my selfishness I went blundering on, and — yet how could I veer round all of a sudden and say that I was sorry? It had to be done, no one could hold a person to a repented-of promise, but—well, nothing seemed to make it easier for mo, nothing ever will! If only they got on better, poor souls! If I was a religious woman, I could pray tor them, but I'm not good; I'm just a soured, discontented old hag. When he——» «Christie,» I cried softly,» are you awake?» First class assortment of English soft goods, dress materials, hostery, haberdashery, linen, tweeds and cashmeres. New seasons goods.

"The girl was very young.» Christie continued placidly, «extremely pretty, and phenomenally fool-ish. Just the sort of girl a clever man likes-their intellects are not so likely to clash!>

She helped herself to more tart, and laughed. But I had my suspicions of Christie. «How do you know that the woman never regretted it all?» I questioned her. «How can any one

really know?>

Christie sbrugged her shoulders. «I judged by her manner,» shs replied; «I was chmmy with her then, and we are thicker friends then, and we are thicker friends than ever now. She always langhs when she speaks about it, and she can feel sorry for them both—sin-cerely sorry. Two sure signs that she is cured, don't you think so? The man has tired of the girl because he has discovered that she never had it in her to care one rap for him; to his unending surprise he found that he had been married because he was a rising man, and a 'good match.' Man like, he was astonished and annoyed at finding a mere woman where his imagination had set up a saint. Men, as I said before, are such fool!» «Then you think,» I asked tremulously, «that without Tom, I-I shall be happy, too?. But Christie, all at once, waxed enappish. «I don't!» she denied. «I never never advise any one; why should I? I go my own way, and please myself in everything; I am reasonable enough to expect every one to do the same.> Then I made an idiot of mysef before Christie's vary eyes; ob, it was humiliating! But she soothed me, comforted me, cried with me-bas any one so many sides to her rugged little nature as Christie! - then rounded on me with asmart scold-ing, and packed me off to bed! Now, generally I sleep like a top, and Christie knows it. But that worried, I suppose—I awakened with a start just as Christie was talking Christina Dalton to sleep.
