POLITICAL NOTES.

There was a general absence of political news, and even of polemic, yesterday. In fact the only novelty was the appearance of another long letter from Dr. Angel Floro'Costa, who has transferred his attentions from the Sigla to the Razon, being offended because the former paper printed one of his letters on the second page instead of the first! The Siglo wittily excuses itself saying that so bril liant a writer as Dr. Costa could not fail to be read even if he were placed among the advertisements. We regret that we cannot tell our readers what Dr. Costa's latest efusion is about, but we must conless that we have not read it. Life is rather too short to read all he writes.

The Government has given a negative to the application of Sr. Huysmanns to work a mine of amianthus (a kind of asbestos) which he has discovered some forty metres from the Cerro fortress, nearly on the top of the Cerro Hill. The reason for the negative is an Article in the Mining ernment faculty to deny permission to carry on mining operations within 1400 metres of fortified

The Government has officially approved the statutes of the North German Fire Insurance Company represented here by Sr. Juan Es-

The Civic Registers were open again on Thursday, the num-ber of registrations made being 335, making a total to date of 1357. This is slow progress, yet all the party papers keep urging their readers to inscribe,

On Thursday there took place in the Office of Public Credit the 4th amortisation of the Extraordinary 1897 Loan. Three tenders were accepted for the amortisation of $33,300 nominal, at the rates of 64.25, 64.27 and 64.27 % respectively, the effective value being $21,399.91, leaving a balance of $2 15 to be carried forward

According to a contemporary-but we rather think the statement requires confirmation-the Super rior Tribunal following the course it recently took with Dr. Ballosteres, has asked for the resignation of Dr. Montano, Criminal Judge of the 2nd Turn, and of Dr. Rovira, the Correctional Judge, but both these funcionaries have roundly refused to resign, preferring to be dismissed if proper grounds can be found for such a step. We cannot say what course the Tri bunal will adopt in such an emergency, but we think there are good grounds for the removal of at least one of the two Judges named, and such a step would produce a good public impression.

Col. Gaudencio, Commandant General of Marine and Capain of the Port, has presented to the Government an elaborate proposal for changing the name of his office to that of «Prefectura Maritima, and of reconstructing the staff mainly with military men. Why this office, the duties of which are by no means of a military nature, should thus be militarised is more than we understand. The general opi-nion, if we are not mistaken, is that the military element is already too

The plant yielding what is known in commerce as Ceara rubber or Manicoba, and shipped from the Brazilian ports of Cears, Bahia, and Pernambuco, was identified at Kew eleven years ago as Mani-hot Glaziovii, Muell. Arg. Specimens of the plant were sent from Kew to our colonies and posses-sions which seemed suitable for its cultivation, and the results of the attempts to introduce the Ceara rubber-tree are described in the latest issues of the Kew Bulletin (Nos. 133-234 1898). The tollowing is a summary of the infor mation thus obtained, and it furnishes another example of the valuable work done by Kew in the endeavour to increase the natural resources of British possessions: (1) The plant is readily propagated both from seeds and cuttings. Seeds are abundantly produced in almost every part of the world where the plant has been introduc-They may be gathered from plants when only three to five years old There is, therefore the great advantage that a large area could be planted within a comparatively short period. Sowing the seeds in the position where they are to grow permanently is universally adopted in Brazil. It is possible, if adopted elsewhere, this plan would greatly reduce the cost of establishing plantations. (2) The Ceara rubber plant is very hardy, a last grower free from insect and fungoid attacks, requires little or no attention when once established, and thrives in poor, dry, and rocky soils un-suited to almost any other crop. It is evident, however, that the yield of a few trees cannot be remuner ative, and only large areas can hope to make the industry a paying one.
(3) It produces a good class of rubber, second only when well prepared to the best Para rubber. For this there is a steady and con-tinuous demand. The yield per tree is apparently small, but a return is obtained earlier than from any other rubber plant. With thick planting and judicious thinning as the trees grow up, it may be pos-sible to increase the yield hitherto recorded; while with skillul treatment the permanent trees may be tapped twice yearly, and last in a productive state for fifteen to twenty years .- Nature.

The Pension as a Factor in Longevity.

A potent factor in the prolongation of human life beyond the common span which has been unaccountably overlooked in recent discussions on the subject is the possession of a pension. Sir Andrew Clark has recorded the case of the chaplain to a London Hospital who was pensioned off on account of heart disease, which it was thought would speedily slit the thinspun thread of his life, and who lived for nearly half a century afterwards, doubtless praising God, and, let us hope, blessing the enlightened liberality of the commit tee. But probably the most striking examples in illustration of the effectof a pension in promoting longevity are to be found in the United States, where a large army of veterans who fought in the great Civil War live on in spite of most complicated ailments which would certainly kill most people whose constitution is not fortified by the elixir that dwells in a grant of public money. Many of these veter-ans, like Artemus Ward, escaped a wound in battle because they were not there, but a disability contracted in the service does just as well. With a little ingenuity it is possible to device pathological conditions of the most moving kind .-British Medical Journal,

Hot Water Street Lamps.

There have been rumours that the latest thing in applied science was to be street lamps for London that should supply the weary pedestrian with tes, coffee, cocoa, and hot water on the penny-in the slot system. The rumours were true, and the new hot water lamp is an established fact, as anyone who chooses to make a journey to Queen's Buildings, South ark Bridge Road, may verify. The lamp looks somewhat like an overgrown gas lamp standing on a square base, which is really a tank containing some fifty gallons of water. This latter is supplied from the street main by a small pipe, which, curling through the already warmed water in the main tank, runs up the lamp-post and passes in a spiral of many swirls ound and round three great gas flames. The heat turns it into steam, which, confined at a pres-sure of thirty pounds to the square inch, becomes super heate I and, passing downwards, keeps the water in a small tank above the main one always boiling. From the upper tank the steam passes to the main one, which it keeps at a temperature just below boiling point, and from which the smaller boiling task is kept supplied. A hall-penny put into the slot at the side releases a spring and enables a handle to be pulled over, where-a spout in any quantity up to a gallon the purchaser may require. At present only the hot water is on tap; a little later compartments in the square pedestal will be filled with tablets of compressed lea, cocos, &c. Cups will be attached to the base, and then anybody who wants a cup of tea or cocoa will put his penny in the slot, draw a compressed packet from the drawer, drop it into the cup, turn on the boiling water by means of another halfpenny, and enjoy the cup that cheers at any hour of the night or day.

THE RECRUDESCENCE OF QUARANTINE.

(HOSPITAL.) It is not a little curious, at this somewhat advanced period of the history of civilisation, to find that proposals for the more or less complete restoration of quarantine, as a protection against the introduction of disease, are not only received with favour by non medical legislative bodies and by certain sections of the general public, but are advocated and to some extent enforced, by direct medical authority. We have heard of so called «quarantine camps» as part of the organisation called into existence for the purpose of checking the advance of bubonic plague in Bombay, and the New York Medical News, of so late a date as Christmas Day, contains not only the full text of Senator Caffery's Bill for the more strict enforcement of quarantine in the United States with reference to yellow fever, but also, what is infinitely more curious in a medical journal, a leading art icle commendatory of the course proposed, in which it is said that Congress has before it for enactment this winter no measure of more pressing urgen-cy than this Quarantine Bill introduced by Senator Caffery. It does not surprise us that an ignorant population should stand on guard at railway stations with load ed lire arms, and should forbid trains to stop or passengers to alight, but it does surprise us to find a medical contemporary even appearing to admit that, «the paper plausibilities of quarantine, are able to confer some kind of degree of additional security upon States in the vicinity of those which may he visited by a yellow fever epidem

The belief that any such security can be alforded in the manner indicated is one which could hardly fail to spring up and flourish during the darkness of the Middle Ages. The first proposals for quarantine date from the middle of the fourteenth century, and ori ginated in the city of Milan, as a precaution against the Black Death | miral Camara's reserve squad-The example thus set was followed in Venice, where the first laza retto was established in 1423, the disease then to be kept at bay being bubonic plague. Two al Auñon, is on board the flagship centuries later the system «Pelayo« but is expected to return was almost universal and had (how?) after he has given his final reached its full development, insomuch that very elaborate regulations were formed and enforced in this country with reference to the plague which appeared so early as in 1636, and which committed such terrible ravages in London and in some country districts, as at Eyam, between 1663 and 1666. These endeavours to exclude plague were as effectual, in the words of Sir John Simon, sas if their intention had been to bar out the east wind or the new moon; but, notwithstand ing this, the epidemic of cholera which prevailed in Europe in 1831 found not only the popu-lace, but even the sanitary authorities of this country, prepar ed to trust in quarantine as their supreme hope. As the Govern-ment could only control the regular channels of trade or passage, all persons of influence resident on the coast, and particularly in retired villages, were urged to impress upon their neighbours the dangers of intercourse with sinugglers and other evaders of quarantine It might have been thought that this very injunction would of itself have been sufficient to prove to those who issued it the utter futility of the whole proceeding. The Government was able to interfere just so much as to cause the maximum of inconvenience and loss to healthy people, and the maximum of injury to trade; and, when this was done, they were unable to touch so much as the fringe of the innumerable points of leakage, which even the best or-ganised system of quarantine must leave wholly unprovided for. Not-withstanding the quarantine, the disease was not only introduced, but it spread with terrible rapidity and produced a mortality of many thousands, the precise amount of which it would now be impossible to ascertain. Taught by experience, the General Board of Health, in 1849 and in 1852, strenuously pointed out that quarantine could not give any but a false security for the purpose it pretended to accomp-lish; and adducing illustrations of sion, that this country should entirely set aside its existing quarantine establishments, and should rely exclusively upon the pro-tection it could derive from a system of local sanitary improvements. Our present method is to admit disease freely, but to be on the watch for it when it comes. If plague or yellow fever were brought to any English port, the actual sick would be landed and placed in a proper hospital for the reception of infectious cases; the sound would be permitted to pro-ceed to their several destinations, the sanitary authorities of which would be instructed to keep them under observation until all danger was past, and to send them to hospital if the disease should show iself in them; and the ship and its cargo would be subjected to disinfection. When we had quarantine, plague and cholera were not only introduced, but destroyed their thousands. During the last European epidemic, cholera was introduced into many of our ports, and if fizzled out as would be instructed to keep them of our ports, and if fizzled out as harmlessly as a lighted match on a stone floor.

The latest news is that on Thursday the U.S. fleet made another attack on Santiago, or rather on the defence works of the bay 5000 (f) shells were fired. The batteries to the West of the Morro were almost completely des-troyed, four of the Spanish vessels were touched and no one hurt ! It is further stated that the last defences raised by the Spanish at Caimanera have been destroyed in a bombardment by the "Texas," «Marblehead» and «Swanee» The Spanish tried to reply but their fire was useless and they were rapidly compelled to evac-uate The «Vesuvius» fired three shells from her dynamite gun, each containing a charge of 200 pounds of gun cotton, the explosion of which wrecked everything in a radius of 20.) yards. (Where this was is not clear, neither do we understand how Caimanera is being bombarded when it is supposed to be in the possession of the Americans.) The Spanish continue to harass the American encampments There is no news about the arrival of further forces, notwithstanding the frequent assertions of the arrival frequent assertions of the em barkation of expeditions last week and the beginning of this. It is now said, however, that President Mc-Kinley has given orders for the preparation of a large force for the invasion of Puerto Rico! It is once more stated, this time from Spanish sources, that Adinstructions to Admiral Camara According to a Madrid telegram, General Linares, Commander of Santiago, has telegraphed to his Government that he is unable to say if any American forces have landed at Caimanera, for it is twenty leagues away and the roads are impassible! It is now stated that the Spanish Government has refused to exchange the pri-soners of the «Merrimac» for those of the «Argonauta» Matters seem quieter politically in Matrid, and we hear nothing more for the mo ment of a change of Government. Several of the leading Madrid papers are beginning a campaign in favor of peace, saying that the large majority of the people really desire it but are afraid to say so on account of the violence of exaltados, who quality any hint of peace as anti-patriotic. There are, however, contradictory mess-ages, which affirm that Spain desires to continue the war-being convinced that the U. States are impotent to take either Cuba or Puerto Rico and will soon get tired of the struggle, especially if complications arise with other powers. There is again a lack of news from Manila. The attitude of the German squadron is still much discussed, though the idea seems now to predominate that Germany has no further inten-tions beyond the protection of her own interests in the Philli-pins. The cruiser «Wilhelm» has lett Nagasaki for Manila, and the entire German squadron in the Extreme East will soon be concentrated in Phillipine waters.

LONDON NOTES

FRIDAY, MAY 20.

Mr. Gladstone passed peacefully to his rest yesterday morning, Mrs. Gladstone and all the other members of the family being with him when he breathed his last. His strength had been diminishing from midnight. About daybreak the Rev. Stephen Gladstone began to read the prayers for the dying at the bed side, and just at five o'clock the long-prayed for peace came. When the doctors agreed that the soul of the great statesman had fled, the weeping family left the room taking Mrs. Gladstone with Telegraphic messages were dispatched to the Queen and the Prince of Wales. Her Majesty, in acknowledgment, sent a touching message of condolence to Mrs. Gladstone. Within an hour of the death, the following intimation was posted at the Castle: «In the natural course of things the funeral will be at Hawarden. Mr. Gladstone expressed a strong wish to have no flowers for his funeral and the family will be grateful if this desire is strictly respected »

There was only a brief sitting of the House of Commons in the afternoon but there was an exceptionally large attendance of members, most of whom were dressed in black. When Mr. Balfour rose to move the adjournment as a mark of respect to Mr. Gladstone's memory, those present removed their ory, those present removed their hats—a tribute of respect that the House pays as a rule only when receiving a message from the Queen.

The Leader of the House, who spoke with evident emotion, said that was not the occasion on which to give utterance to any of the thoughts which naturally suggest-ed themselves. That would be presented on the morrow, when it would be his duty in Committee of the House, to propose an address to her Majesty praying her to grant the honours of a public funeral to Mr. Gladstone, and in case of that not being consistent with his expressed wishes, or the wishes of those who had a right to speak on his behalf, praying that a public monument should be erected in Westminster Abbey in his honour. The House was then formally moved into committee and immediate ly adjourned, the proceedings oc-cupying just five minutes.

Telegrams of condolence from abroad have reached Mrs. Glad-stone and Mr. Herbert Gladstone has received a sympathetic mess age from the American Ambassa dor attached to the Court at St. James. Dispatches from all parts of the country finally prove the universality of the national sorrow-a sorrow which will find suitable expression when the House of which Mr. Gladstone was so long a dislinguished ornament assembles to-

Addressing the shareholders in the African Trans Continental Te-legraph Company day, Mr. Cecil Rhodes explained his scheme of telegraphs across Africa, and said that cable communication from Capetown to Cairo would soon be no longer an imaginative dream, but a practical commercial reality.

«Yes,» she sighed, ait is a little. But my sister teels it more than I

Ab, yes. What a very beautiful girl your sister is, Miss Treherne!» Something which she thought she distinguished in his tone arrested her. She momentarily raised her eyes to his face. He was strolling slowly, his hands clasped behind him, his head slightly bowed, looking on the ground. Marion became conscious of a keen sense of disappointment. She felt angry with herselt; a like angry

«Now,» he eard, athis strikes me as the kind of place a man could settle down in very comfortably. Af-ter a brief silence he added: «That sounds rather fogyish, doesn't it? You know I am old enough to be your sister's father.»

"Joan is seventeen, said Marion. «I am thirty eigh. But you cannot measure age by years, I have lived a hard life. Now, you seem much more on my own level. Of course, I don't mean that I regard you as nearly my own ->

«A very rash proceeding, I should say, Mr. Lowrie.

«After all, it can't be a rare occurrence.»

«It implies that you fall in love merely with a person's face.» «Some faces,» he said; «some women's faces possess a quality which can't be misunderstood. You may pause to make sure they are confirmed by obaracter, but in nine cases out of ten, the face is the first attraction. I suppose, too, the face is the expression of the sum of one's obar-

«Before you even spoke to her?»
asked Marion, with a sense of cold about her heard.

"Before I spoke to her. Boyish, waen't it?" Yes, I am old enough to know better. I found an opportunity to introduce myself. My first impres-sion was confirmed, as I knew it would be. But the difficulty remains. I am not foolish enough to imagine she has gone through a similar experience. I have spoken to her less than helf-a dozen times in all. *Perhaps it would, he answered brusquely, and soon afterwards said good-bye.

When Joan returned, she found her sister locked in her bedroom, and clamoured for admittance.

«I met Mr. Lowrie,» she said.
«We had quite a long talk. He really is awfully nice, and be thinks no
