albuminous epidermis may be dis-solved by an alkaline solution with moderate friction. When the thickening has been reduced sufficiently, it may be kept down by daily washing with soap. The soft corn requires removal with the knile; if it be of modelate size, a single pinch with a pair of pointed seissors will effect its removal, while the hard callous will require patient digging with the point of a not too sharp a knife. The eye of the corn may be always made visible by rubbing the part with eau de Co-logue or spirits of wine, and any remains of the core may be detected in this way, either during or after the operation.

The removal of a corn may be very considerably aided by the use of the compound fincture of iodine painted on the swelling. Soap and water, so useful to the skin in many ways, are expressly service-able to feet afflicted with corns, and particularly when they are soft corns. Daily washing with soap, and the subsequent interposition of a piece of cotton-wool tetween the toes, may be considered as a cure for a soft corn. In these cases the skin may be hardened by sponging with spirits of camphor after the washing. The cotton-wool should be removed at night, and this is a good time for the camphor-

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Executive has signed and promulgated the Law creating the Treasury of Charity, by asigning special taxes to the support of the Caridad Hospital, the Asylums and the other benevo-lent institutions under the control the National Committee of Charity and Benevolence. The Law is too long and intricate for trans-lation. The point of it which most concerns our readers is that it raises the license (patente) on Foreign Insurance Companies from two to four per cent on the revenue of the policies issued here. On lite insurances the tax remains two per cent as before, and agricultural insurances are ex-empted. The other point of public interest in the Law is that it ompletely suppresses the sale of

*Sports tickets on foreign races.
The Executive has also signed men, eliminated by the Borda Go-perties in the interior. Sunday being the final day for the opening of the civic registers, there was quite a rush to the tables and 900 inscriptions were made. The total of the inscriptions throughout the Republic should be known shortly. The period of scrutiny and challenge now commences.

Publication has been made of the statistics of the foreign commerce of the Republic for the first half of the present year We will reproduce and analyse them at an early opportunity

The arrest by the Brazilian authorities at Santa Ana of the two collectivists conspirators Majors Burgos and Isasmendi is fully confirmed, and we understand that the Government will make a formal application to the Brazilian Government for their internation.

It is stated that Sr. Federico Capurro is about to form a parliamen-tary Committe to further the candidature of Sr. Cuestas for the forthcoming presidential election.
As his candidature is already secured by the electoral accordathis seems rather superfluous, but

Respect to the first anniversary of the murder of President Idiarte Borda atfords a good excuse for this departure from the usual programme, though it is possible there are other reasons behind.

« JEANNETTE»

Tais operetta, the composition of the local amateur Mr. G. E. Still, was produced at the San Felipe Theatre, under the auspices of the Entertainment Society, on Satur-day sevening, before what was probably the largest and most representative audience that has vet attended any function given by the Englis 1 speaking amateurs of

The production of a musical work, in which composer, librettist, performers, orchestra and con-ductor are all amateurs, is certainly a formidable, not to say audacious, undertaking, and it is therefore very much to the credit ot all concerned that the perform-ance passed off, not merely without hitch or breakdown of any kind, but also with a very considerable amount of success, the large audience warmly applauding the performers and giving the com-poser an enthusiastic ovation at the end of each of the two acts. In lact, the reception was so very favorable that there is no doubt the performance will bear repeti-tion at an early date, and probably his will be arranged.

With regard to the operetta itself, we may say at once that whilst it has its good points, it is by no means free from the defects which might be expected in the first production of an amateur composer. Mr Still has an unquestionable gift of melody, which has enabled him to produce some pretty airs and taking choruses, that carry the operetta through and make it a success. He requires, however, to study the mechanical structure of operatic composition, so as to give his work design, musical coher-ence and unity, all of which at present are sadly lacking A number of airs strung together, however meritorious in themselves, no more constitute an operetta than a pile of bricks cons-titute a house. It would also be an improvement if the recitatives were cut out and a little smart dialogue introduced in their place. As to the plot and the libretto, we must say in all friendliness that they were weak. Mr. Still's talents do not lie in that direction, and he would do well to seek some other librettist than himself. His work as a melodious composer is quite good enough to encourage him to further efforts in that direction to which he should confine himself, and if he will bear in mind the triendly hints given above, we can salely augur for him greater and more durable successes in the future. We now come to the interpretation of the operetta. Mr. Still was very fortunate in the selection of his principal performers. Nothing could have been fresher, more charming and ingenuous than Miss Cooper as the heroine Jean-nette, and it is a pity her part was not given more prominence in the 2nd Act. She sang very sweetly and acted very prettily and gracefully, showing natural talent. and promulgated the Annual Law improved by good fuition, in both of Property Tax (Contribucion In- lines, We look on this young lady mobiliaria) for 1898-99. Her mezzo soprano voice was heard to great advantage in her solos, one of which was encored, and she played her part with great natural charm and vivacity making a through shits. Mrs. Roland was sympathetic in the somewhat trying part of «Marion,» and it was the fault of the part rather than of the performer that it did not make a greater impression. It would be untain to judge Mr. M. Vignoles by his performance of «Rudolph.» for he was unfortunately suffering from a severe sore throat and consequently could not do justice either to the music or to his fine baritone voice. On another occasion we have no doubt he will make a greater mark. The «farewell» duet between him and Miss Cooper roceived a hearty encore.

As the old innkeeper «Gaspar» Mr. G. H. Cooper was a positive revel-ation. Out of the slenderest mater-ials provided by the author-he created a distinct and most As his candidature is already secured by the electoral accordaths seems rather superfluous, but anyhow it cannot do any harm.

Miss Annie Jones, Miss Drever, Miss M. Morse and Miss Ina Robinson all did well in their small parts as hawkers in the 1st

The chorus quite deserves a paragraph to itself. The ensemble of fresh, pretty and smiling faces and graceful, juvenile figures decked out in the brightest of dresses, was a very important factor in the success of the opera. No more charming picture could be wished for, and the contrast to the operatic choruses generally seen here was very remarkable. The choruses were sung well and with plenty of spirit, and if there had been just a little more precision in some of the movements there would not have been a fault to find. The gentlemen, though they modestly kept very much in the background, looked well and did what they had to do carefully, completing the picture,

A very successful feature was the Maypole dance by eight pretty little boys and girls, at the close of the 1st Act. This was danced most gracefully and without a single slip, and the effect was really most charming producing a torrent of applause. This dance, with the finale of the act, had to be repeated. To Miss Cooper, we believe, is due the credit for having trained the children so perfectly.

The orchestra, consisting mainly of amateurs from the Beethoven Society, went through its hard share of the evening's work admirably, playing, in addition to the music of the operetta, Balzon's Minuette and the Waltz «Gladys» and the march «Jeannette» by Mr. Still. The last named was very effective, and both compositions were warm ly applauded. With the exception of the Minuette which was conducted by Mr. Trimble, Mr Still conducted throughout the evening, and his work as composer, con-ductor and arranger of the whole production well deserved the hearty ovation which he received at the

The operetta was preceded by The operetta was preceded by the farce «Taming a Tiger,» which proved sufficiently amusing. Mr. Williams made a very successful first appearance and Messrs, Tow-ers and Denstone played their parts like old stagers. Mr. Denstone we may add, also as sisted in the stager measurement of the openthe stage management of the operolla.

A clever skirt dance by Mr. Smart, in female costume, given between the acts, was warmly ap-plauded, and had to be repeated, Mr. Smart being twice called be fore the curtain.

We think it opportune to add below the following letter for publication which we have received from the composer Mr. G. E. Still.

Dear Sir, -Will you kindly allow me through your valuable columns to thank all those ladies and gentlemen who took part and worked so hard and so well to make my operetta «Jeannette» a success.

I must confess I feel proud-not proud of my operetta-but proud of my peasants, my dear little Maypole dancers, my orchestra, and lastly but not least of the ladies and gentlemen both English, native and loreign that attended the pertormance.

Those taking part have done more than I expected of them and I thank them all most heartily. - You, Sir, as Editor of your paper, cannot praise yourself, but I can, and I wish everybody to know that to you as stage manager I am indebted to a great extent for our success — I say our, because those who took part showed as much interest in its production as Let me also thank the Commit-tee of the Entertainment Society Corns, And How To Treat Them, for their valuable assistance in carrying out toe business arrange will be of interest to many here:-With regard to our visitors from Montevideo, we were all delighted to welcome them on this side, and I hope that they enjoyed the trip sufficiently, to ensure that their visit will be the forerunner of many more. Unfortunately they were not able to bring their usual team, the Messrs Sardoson and Buchanan hairs unable to Buchanan being unable to cross over, and this to a great extend must account for their three matches resulting in reverses, for with strangers in their team their combination was naturally broken up, and thus they were unable to show us their true form.

At the same time, as a critic, may I be allowed to offer our good friends from the other side a few suggestions. It was at once apparent that they had been playing principally against slow and heavy teams, and their whole style appeared to me to be a little old-fashioned, with one brilliant exception, for as one of our players remarked to me This goal keeper is too good altogether, we can't let him go back to Montevideo, we must keep him. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Davies, who «kept» extremely well throughout, saving in marvellous fashion many difficult shots, and I hope our custodians (may have learnt a lesson from the brilliant exhibition of «fisting» that this player treated

The backs lie too far back altogether, practically keeping in one position the whole time, whether their side is attacking or not, while they should remember that golden rule which all fullbacks should take to heart namely to get rid of the ball as soon as possible. The half-backs should also back up their forwards more, whom they must remember it is their duty to feed with judicious passes, and wild kicking should carefully be avoided. The forwards might be much quicker on to the ball, and might with great advantege shoot more than they do, their hesitation in this respect in front of goal being very marked.

The inhabitants of the lonely isle of St. Kilda were astonished one winter, not long ago, at the appearance of a great blood-red, conical object floating on the wild Atlante billows to the westward of Atlantic billows to the westward of the isle. With much difficulty the derelict was brought to shore, and as the St Kildans had never before seen such a queer-looking thing, and could make no guess as to its purpose or place in the scale of created things, they indulged in wild visions of its valuable nature. But when the factor came across on his yearly visit from the neighbouring, but distant, island of Great Britain, he identified it as a great iron buoy, which, it subsequently appeared, had broken away from its moorings in New York barbour, and drifted in the Gulf Stream across the Atlantic It had taken two years in the passage.

The Making of the World.

The materials with which Nature works, seemingly so diversified, actually so few, are never at peace. They know neither baste nor rest. They are ever in circulation. No sconer have they served one purpose than they are called upon to appear in another role... The rivers hasten to make a lake in every hollow. Yet these hollows are in many instances scooped out by the action of glaciers. However, no sconer are they filled with water than the very glaciers which ex-cavated their basins and the rivers which filled them conspire to turn them once more into solid land. We see this specimen of the ceaseless activity of Nature in many shapes. The «loess,» or the mud, held in suspension by the rivers which overflow their banks, and which is eventually deposited, forms a wellmarked geological formation over a considerable section of Central Europe; and the mud of the Arctic a similar condition of affairs ob- | service.

tained, is fast filling up many of the fjords into which the infra-glacier stream discharges. The Baltic is fast becoming a shallow lake. The Sea of Azof, shoaled by the sediment brought down by the rivers which flow into it, is gradually being converted into a stream; and the Po, the Nile, and the other rivers which flow into the Me-diterranean, bid fair to so ex-tend their deltas as to constitute that sea a chain of lakes. The Mississippi and other great American rivers are, on the principle of erob-bing to Peter to pay Paul, extend-ing the territory through which they flow for considerable distance into the Atlantic. In time these mud flats will rise above the surface, get covered with a dank vegetation and, after being for ages the home of lever and reptiles, will become the abode of man. The Rhine, it has been calculated, carries past Bonn something like 400 tons of solid matter in one hour, and in the course of a year between three and four millions. In the long ages since this wearing-down of Germany has been going on, an immense amount of land must have been eroded, and deposited into the been croded, and deposited into the German Ocean, where it forms the greater part of the country now known as Holland. «The Nether-lands,» Napoleon Bonaparte as-serted, in his usual dogmatic manner, «are composed of the mud of French rivers. > And as it is not easy to answer the master of many legions except after his own style of argument, he proceeded to annex Batavia to the Empire. During the rainy season of 122 days the mud brought down by the Ganges pass-ing Ghazeepoor, 500 miles from its mouth, is reckoned at over 339,-413 700 tons; and now plague baunted islands, formed in its channel even within the memory of man, are the result. The deltas of the Volga, the Danube, and many other rivers might be adduced in proof of the same trait .- Our Earth and its Story.

Refreshment Department, June 24, 1896
To Messrs. James Buchanan & Co. Scotch Whisky Merchants, London, E. C.
Gentlemen:
I am glad you have brought the matter before me, that a Scotch Whisky is being sold in the Colonies entitled «House of Lords» Scotch Whisky.
This may be to a certain extent misleading to the general public.
You are the only Firm who supplies this Department with Scotch Whisky in bottle, and I know nothing of any other Whisky sold on the market as «House of Lords.»

(A SHORT STORY)

The next morning at breakfast Mrs. Dixon wanted to know all about the dance. It was an ordeal which Mona bad dreaded.

«My dear, you are eating no breakfast, and you look quite worn out,» Mrs. Dixon remarked an-xiously, interrupting Trix's anim-ated account of the fun, and turning to Mona.

«No wonder she's tired after such a harculean task as that of subjugating Saint Michael» Winnie exclaimed, balf laughing half sulkily.
«Was Mr. Lord there?» Mrs. Dixon asked, evidently astonished.

«He was. How many times did you dance with him, Mone? What is the matter? You look as if you had seen a ghost!» Winnie continued.

«You forget that there were no in-troductions. Which was Mr. Lord?» Mona asked, in a faint voice, overwhelmed by a fearful suspicion.

«Oh, what a joke! I quite thought somebody must have introduced you. He was the tall, solemn looking,blue eyed man who tempted you out of your corner. He's master of Berryshere, and he owns the handsome but-

Didn't you bear what I said to you during 'Jolly Miller's Jack asked, winking mysteriously.

Mona saw the whole miserable blunder now. She had mistaken «Mike Lord» for «My lord,» and had danced with the master as well as the butler of Berryscourt. «By the way, Mike told me we were welcome to skate on the lake any day. It is quite safe, > Jack con-

"Did be? Let us go this morning!> Trix exclaimed eagerly. "Do you skate, Mona?» «Yes-er-but I am very tired, » Mona stammered.

«Mona and I will drive you there and leave you,» Mrs. Dixon pro-

Safe in her own room, Mona give way to an agony of shame and mor-tification. She did not know whether she wanted most to avoid Michael Lord or to attempt the appalling humiliation of an apology, but she took herskates from the bottom of her trunk and carried them downstairs with her-

"There's Berryscourt! Trix said, when they had driven about three miles and were turning beneath an ancient stone gateway.

Mona looked across a wide stretch of park to an ancient turreted mansion with one wing in pic-ture-sque rains. It rose majestically against a dark background of winter woods

«Saint Michael lives alone except for servant». Trix continued «He came into the property about two years ago, and has done nothing but improve cottages and restore the village churh. He's awfully High Church, and all that sort of thing, you know. He hardly ever goes out or entertains. We've asked bim to our dance, but, of course, he's refused. ed. He goes to the Smiths' because he's very friendly with their eldest son, an invalid, who has something wrong with his spine and can't walk. You didn't see Frank Smith last night. The noise would have been too much for him noor fallow. much for him poor fellow.»
«Mike Lord is just splendid, and it's a shame to call him Saint Michaell» Jack put in indignantly. el sprained my ankle in the Berrys-court woods once, Mona, and he found me and took me on his horse to Berryscourt. I stayed there a fortnight, and it was the jolliest time I ever had in my life.»

Mona's distress increased as she listened. She scanned the few figures already on the lake with dread, but Michael Lord was now there, and Mona allowed her skates to be put

The lake was a large one, narrow-ing at one end to a long arm which stretched into the woods. Mona was a skilful skater, and found a congenial companion in Flora Smith. As they glided towards the narrow end of the lake, a young man with a frank, boyish face caught them up, and Mona soon saw that she was the one too many. She contrived to leave her compenious gradually behind, and soon found herself alone beneath a bigh, rustic bridge, spanning the lake where it entered the woods. Mona sat down on one of the buge blocks of stone which tormed its blocks of stone which tormed its foundation, and gazed with delight up the white avenue beneath the arch, where the snow had been left unswept, and the tall, black treatrunks rose like pillars from a pavement of purest white to an arch of delicate network. A slight noise above her head startled her, and she looked up to see a may leave the startled her. looked up to see a man leaning over the bridge with a field-glass in his hand, through which he seemed to be scanning the broad end of the lake, It was Michael Lord. Mona acted upon an irresistible impulse.
