POLITICAL NOTES.

We cannot yet report any further we cannot yet report any further progress in the movement towards immediate constitutionality. On second thoughts, no special sitting of the Council of State was held on Thursday evening. Whether the idea was broached in yesterday's sitting we are not yet able to say. Anyhow, the movement is well on foot, and it is practically certain that a solution will be reached be-tore the end of next week. We un erstand that the original eminute of communication, with the exbe adhered to, in place of the draft Bill mentioned in our last. This, however, is a mere matter of form as the definite decision must emanate from the new Chambers, and not from the Council of State, and not from the Council of State, which cannot move further in the matter beyond convoking the Chambers to preparatory sittings.

Yesterday Siglo shows a desire to return to the right path from which it has somewhat strayed of late and publishes an article which may be regarded as a reply to the charge recently brought against it by the Dia of intriguing in layor of the presidential candidature of Dr. Juan C. Blanco. In this article it categorically repudiates the imputation that it is desirous of proveking any violation of the selectoral accord.» It says: - Whatever our personal opinions respecting the presidential candidate, we would never exalt them above the decisions of the parties, for the simple reason that in our opinion the salvation of the Republic to day depends on the policy of the accord, which has opened a new and fecund era of labor, in which all well intentioned men may and should Juan C. Blanco. In this article it tentioned men may and should tentioned men may and should cooperate, with entire disregard of petty political differences that have no further value......

The policy of the accord has rescued us from the age of stone in which we have lived for half a century, and in which we seemed condemned to die under the pressure of savage hatreds which prevented a hand shake between two men who thought alike on all present who thought alike on all present and future questions, but who were irreconciliable enemies merely be-cause chieffains who have been cause chieftains who have been dead for many years committed certain atrocities during our civil wars To oppose the accord, then, would be to return to the policy of this age of stone, and would signify a desire to see renewed the former duel between colorados, and colonacos, and to see the country succumbing under fresh wounds until it fell under the control of some better gifted people. These are excellent sentiments and we congratulate the Siglo on their expression, but we think it will find it difficult to deny that its propaganda of late has justified the impression that it was inspired by ganda of late has justified the impression that it was inspired by contrary ideas.

Most of our contemporaries pay a well merited tribute to Sr. R. Dominguez on his quitting the post of Prefect of the Capital, which ha had occupied since September, 1897. He certainly deserves all the praise that can be given him. During that trying period, he proved nimself more than once the bulwark of the situation, and undouttedly helped to save the country from the unspeakable disaster of el among functionaries. Although circumstances compelled him to pay more attention to the political than to the police side of his duties, not even his enemies have been able to raise a complaint against the manner in which be performed them. Not the least of his feats has been the healing of the rupture between the police and the people and for perhaps the first time in the history of the city, the people have learnt to look on the police as their friends and the protectors of their interest, instead of their enemies and oppressors. Certain ly no Prefect ever secured a higher share of personal popul-arity and his appearance in public at critical moments invariably pro-voked a manifestation of sympathy. After Sr. Cuestas himself, there has been no figure more prominent in the trying times of the last fifteen months Sr. Dominguez has made his mark, and we shall not be surprised—and we certainly will be pleased—if some day we do not have to salute him as President of the Republic. Well done, Domin-

Mrs. John Oldham.

It is our painful duty to announce the death, which occurred on Thursday evening about 8 p.m., of the respected matron Mrs. J. Ol tham (nea Attree) wife of the veteran English resident Mr. John Oldham, Manager of the Western and Brazilian and the River Plate Telegraph Companies. Mrs. Oldham, who was of mature age, had been in failing health for some time past, and the mature age, had been in failing health for some time past, and the end of her protracted sufferings was not unexpected. The deceased lady was well known and much esteemed in English-speaking society in Montevideo, and the news of her death has been received with every expression of grief. We beg to tender our sincere sympathy, which we are sure will be shared by all our readers here, with her by all our readers here, with her bereaved husband and sorrowing

It is for six steamers, each of which will be about 10,000 tons gross. The steamers will be of the twin screw type, and four of them will be for type, and four of them will be for the passenger service and two for cargo. The passenger boats will be 560 teet long, and the cargo boats 530 teet The former vessels are to be built by the Clydebank Engineering and Shipbuilding Company, Clydebank Glasgow, and the cargo boats by Messrs. FAILURE OF UTOPIA. THE DEATH OF ICARIA.

Icaria is dead. The oldest, and for long the most successful, at tempt to found a terrestrial Utopia was brought to an end last month, when the lowa Courts formally decreed the winding up of the New Icarian community The Far West has long been, and still remains, the field of many endeavours to carry out the gospel of cliberty equality and fraternity in self supporting communities; and Brook Farm the Greeley Colony in Colorado, Rivers de the numerous Phalanz communities and surious others all munities, and various others all bear witness to a vain search for the ideal existence. But Icaria differed materially from any of its rivals In the reign of Louis Philip-pe, Etienne Cabet, a friend of Prou dhon, attempted to found a model community in France. The Government was actively opposed to the plan, and after a time Cabet resolvdoubtedly helped to save the country of the unspeakable disaster of a collectivist restoration He showed himself possessed of equal energy, tact and high personal courage and has indeed been a jew-before long he was joined by about two thousand French people. The central ideas of the colony were ab solute equality and community of goods. The colonists lived in little goods. The colonists lived in little houses round the central one, where they all had their meats together. So far as possible, the colonists strove to produce all hay required, but twice a year the Directors made all absolutely necessary purchases from the outside world, each member sending in a list of the things he required. The marriage bond was strictly observed, and the life of the people was regulated on a distinctively Christian basis.

the nominal democratic basis of the colony. Cabet had supreme authority. So long as he remained dicta-tor, all went well. But after a few years considerable murmuring years considerate hurming arose concerning his autocratic ways. The members insisted that they should have a more real share in the management, and finally Cabet, with a few of his faithful withdrew altogether from the settlement. A little time before this, sesing the headway the individualistic spirit was making in Illinois, Cabet got a considerable number of the colonists to move to Southern Iowa, where they were more out of touch with civil-isation. Here they established a big agricultural colony in-troducing the careful methods of French culture to the West. They started grape growing, which has since become a considerable industry throughout the State. In lowa the administration was democratic in fact as well as in name. The community owned all property, dividing it out to each family according to its require-ments. All ate at one table, and the care and education of the children was recognised as the duty of the was recognised as the duty of the whole people. The popularly elected officials had no power to do anything beyond what they were directed by the general assembly, and every attempt at self assertion was carefully suppressed.

The French emigrants, full of their ideals, were more than con-their ideals, were more than content to give up their all for the common good, but when their children came in their places the real trou-bles of the community commenced. The industrious complained that all their energy was absorbed in helping on the idle and suiftless colonists. The young people saw their non communal neighbours accumulating riches in a few years, while, work as they would, they never could say that anything was theirs. Twelve years ago, they again divided, and before long the Old Icarians dissolved sharing the properly among the remaining members. The New Icarians still struggled gallantly to realise their ideal. But internal troubles and jealousies proved too strong, and three years ago all the remaining estate was placed in the hands of a Receiver. Acting under the District Court, he has now divided it, and New Icaria has been formally

-As shown in the old fable of the wolf and the lamb, there is no pleasing certain people. The ene-mies and opponents of Sr. Cuestas are just now occupied in accusing him of all sorts of evil and interested intentions because he—and by no means he alone—is in favor of a speedy return to constitu-tional government. What, however, would have been their outery if the case had been the other way about, and he had desired to prolong, instead of shorten, the unconstitutional period? Meanwhile the said enemies and opponents are professing an intense devotion to the Constitution, and are proving that devotion-by trying to prevent the Constitution from coming into operation. Verlly, they may have virtues, but consistency is not one of them.

The biograph pictures of the pilgrims at Lourdes, as shown at the San Felipe Theatre, are well reproduced and very interesting, the movement of the crowds and the processions being notable. Certainly no one can declaim against them as immoral and it is to be regretted the moral, and it is to be regretted the biograph does not confine itself to scenes of this description instead of launching into bull fights. The representation will be repeated

Buenos Aires Clubs. The task of organisation has been entrusted to a special committee composed of Messrs. Rippin, Fraser, Stur-zenegger, Davie, Williams and Maclean, Mr. G. Colladon being President. -The Superior Tribunal has confirmed a mild sentence of eleven years' imprisonment on Pablo Deus Perez for the unprovoked murder of Luis Vasquez, committed in Calle Piedras in October, 1897. The two had a quarrel over a question of work, and Perez stabbed the other to death.—Dr. Montano has pronounced a sentence of acbas pronounced a sentence of acquittal on Felipe Barendelli, who was charged with the manslaughter of the woman Vicenta Paes, with whom he lived. He commenced playing with a loaded gun when he was drunk, and the weapon went off and killed the woman. The jury declared that he was anot responsible for the act.

The Theatre of Varieties at Plymouth has been destroyed by fire. We hardly think the importance of the establishment warrantance of the establishment warranted a telegram, but there is no ac counting for the vagaries of the service. -The Cabinet crisis in Spain still hangs fire, owing to the continued illness of Sr sagasta. Theoft threat ened Carlist revolution also haigs fire, and it may be doubted if it will come off. The telegrams have made a vain effort to revive the ca nard of some months ago that Don Carlos had raised a large loan in London to back his pretensions. We cannot conceive anything more

-Lynch law, says the B. A. Hrald, is a drastic sort of Justice, but it would be a great thing for this country if it could be admin-istered thoroughly for a month. It would clear the atmosphere greatly if a lew 'comisarios,' justices and other rulfians were to be strung up to lampposts and trees, and that is just that would take place if we were a more spirited and plucky people. When San Francisco hanged out of the court-house window one or two disreputable judges and lawless ruffiens who had a pull with the authorines there followed a steady, radical raform which has continu radical reform which has continued until to day. We, on the other hand, appear grateful to those who kick us about, rob us and made slaves and drudges of us. The people trave no public spirit.

-The Quirer says a telegram publishes an account of a convers-ation which Queen Victoria held some days ago with one of her ladies in waiting. After giving her opinion upon the British Empire, the Queen said: «My personal influence has always been thrown into the scale in layour of peace. There have been wars, but the object of done so that my name should al-ways be associated with peace and friendship. Nothing would cause me so great pleasure as to be certain that my spirit would be able to go on watching the destinles of Britain and cooperate in the fulfil-ment of so noble a task.

-In mentioning a performance just given in one of the theatres at Buenos Aires, the B. A Herald says: - «During a serpentine dance at the close of the performance, when the flags of all Nations were when the flags of all Nations were being shown on the dancer, the audience proved itself to be mostly composed of Spaniards by loudly hissing the British flag and a portrait of Queen Victoria as well as the 'Stars and Stripes,' but cheered loudly directly the red and yellow of Spain was shown. This seemed of Spain was shown. This seemed rather peculiar at an entertainment given specially for the English. -It is quite probable, says the B. A. Standard that the U. S. cruiser Chicago, 4 500 tons, will soon come to the Plate as flagship. The Chicago has been entirely re-built since she was here during the Chilian U.S. war scare. She has new boilers, engines, guns, etc., etc., and her speed has been increased so that she can steam at from 1d 1/2 to 19 knots Her cabin partitions are of stamped steel covered with cork, and what wood work there is, is fire-proofed, as in all rebuilt and new American ships. Her new battery consists of 14 5 in. 40 calibre and 4 8 in. 4 cal quick fire guns, the last four guns not being quite ready as yet. There are also a number of 6 and 3 There are also a number of 6 and 5 pounder guns, both sizes we believe of the semi-automatic type Four of the Chicago's new boilers are of the single and Scotch marine type, of nickel steel and carrying steam at 260 pounds pressure, and six are of the Babcock and Wilcox watertube (tubulous) marine type. The rebuilt Chicago ranks among the most formidable cruisers of her size affoat and we hope she will be assigned to this station as is

-We quote from the Rio News of Dec. 13 - We deeply regret to hear that the American minister, Mr. Charles Page Bryan, met with a painful accident on Tuesday last, which has confined him to his room during the week. He sprained his ankle while on an excursion up the Corcovado, but the injury, under the skilful hand of Dr Havelburg, is rapidly disappearing, and our popular minister will be fully reestableshed in another week.

-It is stated that negotiations are well advanced in New York for raising a Russian loan of ninety million dollars.

A London telegram states that a certain Lord Sweagh has given no less than quarter of a million sterling to the Jenner Insti-tute for the promotion of bio-logical investigations, and a similar sum to improve the working class quarters in Dublin. We cannot guess who may be the philanthropist referred to, but he is evidently as generous as he is wealthy.

-The bicycle tourists returned yesterday morning in the river steamer «Paris,» well browned but otherwise none the worse for their adventurous trip, which they report as having been most enjoyable. We are in treaty with them for the publication of all their adventures by flood and field. Unfortunately they did not being many trophies, luggage on an extensive scale being incompatible with the ordinary bike.

-At a meeting held on Thursday evening, the Statutes of the Union Industrial Uruguaya were approved and the Society definitely constituted This is an association which has been formed for the foment and mutual protection of national industries, and it already has a powerful list of members.

—A minor revolution has been on foot in Bolivia for some days past, apparently provok-ed by the revolution of the Government to change the federal capital. There does not seem to have been much bloodshed yet.

-As soon as the U.S. Senate has approved the treaty of peace, a Committee will be named to as-sess the claims presented against Spain by American citizens on account of the war, and which, according to the terms of peace, remain in charge of the Unit-ed States Government. Claims amounting to over 25 million dollars have already been present-ed, but it is thought that ten mil-lions will suffice to satisfy those that are genuine.

Mme Dreyfus has been granted Mme Dreyfus has been granted permission to telegraph to her husband, and a promise given that a message submitted by her to the Colonial Office shall be forwarded unaltered. A Paris Correspondent states that the action of the military authorities in pressing on the trial by court martial of Colonel Picquart is prompted by the desire to accure an adverse verdict and thus to discredit his evidence before the Appeal Court. The inaugural meeting of the In-ternational Conference against the Anarchests was held in Rome yes terday Extraordinary precautions were taken to secure the safety of the delegates. Notwithstanding the vigilance exercised by the police of late there is reason to believe that several of the Anarchist leaders have arrived in Rome under various disguises.

Lord Rosebery was the principal speaker at a meeting held in Edin-burgh yesterday in support of the National Gladstone Momorial. Mr. Gladstone's association the Scotch Gladatone's association the Scotch capital was, he pointed out, divisable into two portions. As a young man Edinburgh was his home, for his lather resided there; and late in life herepresented Midlothian in Parliament. None who had lived in Edinburgh in November, 1879, could forget the transport of enthusiasm excited by Mr. Gladstone's return to the city. After all the strile was over, what remained with them of Mr. Gladstone was something beyond all politics, with them of Mr. Gladstone was something beyond all politics, something which would survive all the controversies in which he was engaged. By remembering Mr. Gladstone in a manner worthy of his memory, they would be raising and dignifying all memorials. Lord Farrer took the chair last evening at the annual meeting of the Cobden Club, a gathering held at the National Liberal Club. He discussed many home and foreign questions connected with Free

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman addressed his constituents at Stiraddressed his constituents at Stirling last right, and condemned the tendency which Sir Michael Hicks-Beach had shown to talk of war at critical moments. While complaining of the British tendency to pharisa am in disputes with other pharisaism in disputes with other nations, the right bon, gentleman declared the French claims in the Nile Valley to be unsound, and censured the intrigue of the French Colonial party.

British maritime power was the subject discussed at a meeting of the Constitutional Club last night. Sir John Colomb, who was the chief speaker, urged the absolute necessity of maintaining our navy at a strength which would enable it to meet the ships of any two other Powers The great problem before politicians was whether the various parts of the Empire could not combine for the purposes of national delence.

Lord Kitchener visited Cambridge yesterday for the purpose of re-ceiving the freedom of the borough from the civic authorities and an honorary degree from the University. The Sirdar was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the populace, guards of honour being formed at the Guidhall and the Senate House by the Town and University Volunteers. Over a great portion of the country yesterday the snow storms of the preceding day were succeeded by heavy rains. Serious floods were consequently reported from various quarters. At Bolton a governess on her way home was overcome by the intense cold, and was found dead in a snow drift. Heavy weather was again experienced in the Channel, and further wrecks were reported from many parts of the coast. Stirring scenes were witnessed at Bournemouth, Dymchurch, and Dunkirk. Thomas George Senior, a member of the sect known as the Peculiar People, was, at the Central Criminal Court yesterday, found guilty of the manslaughter of one of his children, who had died through his neglect to provide medical assistance in the child's illness. Gentlemen:
I am glad you have brought the matter before me, that a Scotch Whisky is being sold in the Colonies entitled «House of Lords» Scotch Whisky.
This may be to a certain extent misleading to the general public.
You are the only Firm who supplies this Department with Scotch Whisky in bottle, and I know nothing of any other Whisky sold on the market as «House of Lords.»
You are at liberty to make use of this fact if you deem it desirable.

«Gracious goodness! Who can that be?» cried the mistress of Windybrow, as she sprang to her feet, (A SHORT STORY) while her knitting dropped unbeed-

«I didn't know as you had had a letter, mum,» remarked Hannah, who was a privileged person. «I met Jimmy the postman, and he said there was nows for Windybrow

"I have had not letter, but for all that my son is dead. I am as sure of it as that I am softling here at this moment, He has been murdered-foully and treacheronally murdered!" "Ob, mistress, for the Lord's sake don't say that!" guavered Hannal.

«I do say it, and I teel it to be the solemn truth. I saw it all in a dream last night. Nay, of a curety it was more than a dream—a vision of dream last night. Nay, of a surety it was more than a dream—a vision of something which was happening thousands of miles away, vonchafed to a mother's yearning heart. Yes, Hannab, I, who for years have been blind to all outward objects, by means of some inner sense saw my boy lying asteep in the shade of some strange-looking trees, the like of which do not grow in this country. A little way off, with his back towards me, lay snother man, resteing on his elbow, who seemed to be watching Harry intently. And it was borne in upon—me that they two had been companions through many hardships and dangers Then presently the second man drew a knife from its sheath, and oreeping stealthily up to Harry, plunged it twice into his breast. My poor boy flung out his arms, gave one gasping moan, and all was over. Then the murderer, whose face I could not see, began to plunder the body, but just then the horror of the thing burst the bonds of eleep, and I awoke. No, Hannah, you need not light the lamp any more. My poor Harry will never see Windy brow again.

That had bappened three years ago. Mrs. Carstairs had put on mourning for her son, and had caused prayers to be said for him at the piace of worship which she attended.

She was a tall, spare, somewhat frail-looking woman, with grey hair, over which she wore a small lace cap; clear-cut, refined features, and the remains of very considerable personal attractions. Her mouth and personal attractions. Her mouth and chin were almost masculine in the impression they gave of resolution and strength of will. Her sightless eyes, of the darkest blue, were still beautiful, but it was as though an impalpable veil had been let down between them and the soul behind them whose windows they should have whose windows they should have been. Yet they could not be said to be wholly devoid of expression, rather did they seem like the eyes of one to whom was vouchesfed glimpses cheyond the horizon's rim, where more things lie hidden than are dreamt of in our philosophy.

She was richly but soberly dressed She was righly but soberly dressed in a gown of striped puce and black satin trimmed with rare old lace, while three or four rings gleamed in the firelight to the quick movements of her fingers as she went on automatically with her knisting. A lighted lamp stood on the centre table, for, her affliction notwithstanding, Mrs. Carstairs dieliked sitting in the dark. ting in the dark.

«Although I cannot see it, a can-dle or a lamp feels like company,» she was wont to say.

For the same reason she liked to hear the ticking of the old case

How long she had sat thus alone, immersed in memories of the past, she could not have told, when all at once she came back to the present with a start. It seemed to her that she had heard a murcaur of voices—and her sense of hearing, as in the case of so many blind persons, was abnormally developed — close outside the bay-window of the room in which she was sitting. The sound sent a little thrill through her, more of surprise than of fear. She knew that it was still far too early to expect any of her own people back. What purpose, then, could have brought any one into the grounds of Windybrow at that hour? Her fingers ceased to move, and she became, so to speak, all ears. Taick curtains chaded the window, so that nothing of the interior could be seen from withou; she doubted even whether there was so much as a gleam of lamplight to betray that the room was occupied. Ah! there were the voices again, and—Yes, that was distinctly the sound of footsteps on the gravel! She scarcely seemed to breathe.

Well, there was nothing for her to do—nothing she could do—save await whatever might happen next. The sense of her helplessness was strong upon her, but there was no qualling of her spirit. Most likely the voices she had heard were merely those of tramps, or of so-called gipsies—who, while ostensibly hegging for broken victuals, did not object to tell the maids their fortunes, or to possess themselves of any unconsidered trifles which might happen to be lying about—of whom there were plenty up and down the country-side; only, the hour was a somewhat late one for such gentry
